Feeble French Gangsters
Capone Would Blush
Borrow American Slang
No Thrilling Stick-Ups

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Whether they like it or not, all editors and reporters must be interested in CRIME, because THE PUBLIC is interested in it to such an extent that it becomes to the news of the day what steel reinforcement is to concrete construction; and it is the duty of newspapers to reflect and natterly, while guiding into better channels the public interest.

If you doubt interest in crime, imagine the most "fashionable society lady," the "greatest movie picture star," the most gigantic rich man kidnaped and murdered by some criminal, with the x a of a trained strangler, caught to climb up the outside of a house.

What do you think would happen to the news of the day, to Mussolini, Hitler, Baldwin and France, when that article appeared on the front page?

Human nature being what it is, or as Don Quixote's faithful servant said, men being as God has made them, but many times worse," a few men, time after time, as practiced across the Atlantic, may be acceptable, reputable men, living in France as quite as the primitive American expects it to be.

The French newspaper now, referring to crime and criminals, like to borrow American expressions. Therefore Mr. Bolchaco, after he took up crime, specializing in not any automobiles or automobile stealing, becomes immediately "Le Gangster Bolchaco." You will please pronounce the word as though written "Gonnsstaire."

The French use of English words in connection with crime and sport increases daily and amazingly, the pronunciation fortunately makes no difference.

After a prize fight, for instance, you read that tighter so and so, Associate, the latter fighter, Knockoute it made use of our word "knockout" adding the letter e employed in French verbs in the passe ecrire, or "definite past."

Similarly French writers talk about le home rest of England in the Mediterranean.

A few years ago in France you never heard an Englishword except possibly "jazz, or clarkey, pronounced by the French zerzee-hyper, meaning to have fun at five o'clock, even though you might have it at four or half past six.

The gangster Bolchaco is what scientist genuine American gangsters would call a good deal of a sissy. He would make no Capones laugh. When he approached the genuine article, or succeeded in meeting one, he did not pull a gun and say in gangster roughness, "Stick 'em up." He ordered the tank filled with gasoline, or had his automobile to run away without paying, but that in France is enough to make him a genuine "gangster."

The man robbed of his savings at a Paris bank, knowing the value of frame and named Maginot, Maginot owned the running board of Bolchaco's automobile and would not let go, although, according to police, Bolchaco shot him twice as he hung on in the confusion of the shots, caused.

France is far from producing the genuine gangster, a Fabresse, who, with his "pal" or his "moll," enters a dance hall, containing fifty men and women, sticks everybody up, then orders everybody to lie down, and rifles all the pockets.

That performance would be unthinkable in France, because, as every good Englishman will tell you, it would be impossible to make fifty French men and women keep quiet all at once.

And in Paris the reporters do not climb up the outside of the court house to get through the back of the judge's head, they do not conceal radio sets or other electrical instruments on the roofs of houses and flowers are not sent by sentimental ladies to gentlemen that kill female dancers and others, and in French prisons murderers never die of old age, while writing their memoirs.

REBELS TAKE KEY TOWN IN SPAIN

(Editor's Note: Further rebel advances on the Madrid front, threatening the capital's water supply, are reported today by H. R. Knickerbocker, but the noted correspondent says that though terrorism is increasing, an early end to the Spanish war is unlikely.)

Northern Spanish Rebel Army Headquarters, Burgos, Aug. 3 — Striking to within eight miles of the source of Red Madrid's water supply, the White column from Somo Sierra today captured Lozoyuela, four miles beyond Buitrago, thus placing the spearhead of the rebels' advance 35 miles from the capital.

Eight miles west of Lozoyuela is Lozoya, the principal source of Madrid's water which, if cut off, means capitulation of the capital.

A bayonet charge by a phalanx of Fascists earlier drove the last remnants of Red troops from the village of Guadarrama and put the Whites a step nearer to the actual capture of Madrid.

The Whites took plenty of prisoners, but what is far more important, they also captured five armored cars, which is one species of armament they had notably lacked.

2ND PLACE IN 100 METER TO METCALFE

Berlin, Aug. 3 — The American eagle screamed in victory on the cinder paths of Berlin'. Olympic stadium this afternoon when Jesse Owens and Ralph Metcalfe swept the finals of the men's 100-meter run and Helen Stephens of Missouri hung up a miraculous new world's record in the women's division.

Owens equalled the Olympic and world record of 10.3 seconds in winning.

Owens flung his supple brown body down the rust-red track well ahead of the field, with Metcalfe, Chicago Negro, a good second and Osenbrug of Indiana third.

Only a short while previously, Miss Stephens had run her 100-meter heat in the almost incredible time of 11.8, snipping two-tenths of a second off her own previous world's record and shat-fiords of Spain. The Madrid troops on the Reds are on the defensive, the capital itself is partly, but not wholly, besieged, and while terrorism exercised by both sides upon their enemies behind the front line increases in intensity, the outcome of a speedy decision in the civil war are not bright.

Some perspective can be had from Burgos, capital of General Miguel Cabalcanse military government, and after the experience of a fortnight in the midst of this the bloodiest internecine struggle since the Bolshevik revolution in Russia, the following points may be established:

First—The Spanish land army, numbering theoretically 280,000, but probably not having more than 200,000 effectives, went over almost completely to the rebels, led by General Francisco Franco in Morocco and General Emilio Mola in the north, with the most effective units of the army, the Foreign Legion in Morocco.

Second, the Spanish navy, a disappointment to the rebels, remained loyal to Madrid, with the exception, so far as can be ascertained, of only two ships, the Admiral Cervera and the Canalejas. Incidentally, the White government has just announced appointment of Captain Miguel Moreno Fernandez as chief of the White navy.

NAVY HINDERS REVOLT

Third, loss of the navy to the rebels prevented immediate completion of success of the revolt, for General Franco has been unable to transport his foreign Legion across the Straits of Gibraltar to Spain, and lack of these formidable forces, who are the best fighters in the army and the least scrupulous towards their enemies, has so far checked the rebel advance on Madrid.

Fourth, the Spanish air corps, with some 200 airplanes but boasting only 150 actually serviceable planes at the outbreak of the revolution, is divided about equally for and against Madrid, but Madrid retains the superior bombing airplanes. Most of the air officers went over to the rebels, but Madrid kept the leading officers, especially non-commissioned flying officers, to make its air defense the most formidable obstacle to a quick rebel advance from the north.

Fifth, the three columns of rebels in the north have reached points almost within sight of Madrid, at Siguenza, some 50 kms. and Guadarrama, and in each case having made advances to strategic points, their position is not much better than it was when the revolt broke out.

REDS' BLOODY ATROCITIES

Sixth, the Madrid government, or the Reds, still hold the capital and all the territory reaching down to Valencia, although today the rebels claim without confirmation to have taken that seaport. Barcelona and virtually all Catalonia remain in anti-Fascist hands, nor has San Sebastian, with a spot of territory including Irun and Bilbao, yet been conquered by the rebels.

Red raiding parties from Barcelona, at the moment the only government force in the affluence are devastating the region around Saragossa, one of the chief rebel bases. Today the Whites report Reds in two villages near Saragossa rose with the help of the Barcelona raiders and committed the usual "atrocities" before being driven out.

ONE VILLAGE

In one village, Monegrillo, the Reds killed the mayor, public prosecutor and judge, while in Hijar, like Monegrillo, on the outskirts of Saragossa, the Reds burned two churches, including one famous for its paintings and rich altar pieces, and also burned the convent.

Behind the White lines in Aragon there is beginning to arise a Red vestige which may develop into a considerable threat, despite the presence of loyal guards of state militia, and consisting of small bands of Reds who remained behind as spies, private agents of the White organization sought with

150 SHOT TO DEATH

One man riding it was reported today to have been in Chinchilla, 30 miles behind the rebel lines, when civil guards and the Fascists and Falangists of Arrimon Prime De Rivera, founder of the party, were executed.

Claims are made that the famous Spanish civil guards or state militia, now consisting of 40,000 armed forces in the country next to the armed men, had remained loyal to the government, but this is probably not true in the southern sections traversed by your correspondent, where the civil guards are everywhere co-operating with the rebels.

Today the Whites announced one major, three captains, and 180 men of the civil guard at Badajoz who had had no opportunity to join the rebels took advantage of the confusion to march to Madrid, and deserted as soon as they got out of sight of Badajoz.

These civil guards, assert the Whites, as well as 400 others from Valencia and Ciudia have joined the White forces.

Red and White propaganda continues to make the air of Spain a battlefield. The Reds take no prisoners, but admit all captives is executed daily by the White radio stations in order properly to educate the population.

DRAG BISHOP TO DEATH

Burgos today announced that the Reds in Nava Del Marques poked out the eyes of the local police, and that Reds in Siguenza, which apparently is not yet completely in the hands of the Whites, dragged the bishop to death behind a motor car.

It is also charged that a priest in Rabregordo was killed by the Reds before the Whites occupied the village, where another priest "went mad."

It is quite impossible to check the accuracy of these reports, and some of them bear the stamp of improbability on their face, but the frequency with which they are announced is an index to the cruelty of this civil war.

Thus the significance of the following tidbits of White propaganda lies not in their authenticity, but in the effect they are expected to have on the opinion from which hears and reads them.

STORIES OF HORROR

"Reds in Buitrago poured gasoline over a youth who confessed his Fascist sympathies, and burned him alive," said one.

"A refugee who has just arrived from Madrid reports that the spectacle in the capital is terrifying. On the branches of trees hang clusters of citizens who have been barbarously outraged, while Communists plunder the city."

There does, however, appear to be confirmation that the famous old fortress and artistic monument in Toledo, the Alcazar, was at least partially destroyed when the Reds stormed it to drive out the cadets.

Before the civil war is ended Spain may be lucky to retain any of its monuments, and Europe is anxiously watching to see whether the peninsula will be able to preserve civilization itself.

Soviets Pay To Aid Reds In Spain

Moscow, Aug. 3 (AP)—Soviet workers' committees began collecting funds today to aid Spanish Leftists.

Workers in the Proletarsky Trud plant in Moscow cabled "best wishes" to President Manuel Azana and instructed a trade union committee to ask employes to contribute one-half of 1 per cent of their monthly salaries.

In many meetings the workers expressed sympathy for the people of Spain. One group, by resolution, termed the Fascist insurgents "the worst enemies of the toiling people."

Big Guns Blast Town Out of Existence in Spain

Madrid, Aug. 3 (INS)—Artillery and aerial attack, spreading fire and death, held destructive sway today on a dozen Spanish civil war fronts, while other towns blasted out of existence and another at the mercy of flames.

The government radio announced that Oviedo, where rebels had tried to break through to the fall of Bilbao, San Sebastian, had been "wiped out" in a terrific bombardment, while miners who had seized Oviedo blew up a number of buildings with dynamite, imperiling the entire city of 26,000.

SHIPS POUR DOWN SHELLS

Bombardments concentrated today on either side of the Straits of Gibraltar, deadly shell-fire screamed from Loyalist warships on the southern Rebel army, and it advanced 30 miles northeast of Gibraltar on the way to Malaga.

Battleships also shelled the rebel forts again at Ceuta, Morocco, and communications between there were threatened anew when one Spanish warship, seeking shelter in Ceuta, sent a shell whistling down behind a British merchant steamer.

REDS SEIZE BUSINESS

Fighting was reported on Palma Majorca, as loyalist airplanes bombed it for the third successive day, setting fire to the gas plant, that the shelling would continue, regardless of damage to the island capital, until the rebels surrendered.

The Alcazar at Toledo and Huesca were other targets for bombers, and the government said its loyal troops were 15 miles from Saragossa and closing in on Huesca and Granada.

Guns pounding on Oyarzun in a deadly cross fire from the port of San Marcos and along the Irun-San Sebastian road were responsible for destruction of the town, following which the rebels retreated into the hills, although the siege of San Sebastian continues. Naval guns and rebel artillery battled all day, with crowds over the French border watching the fight from the tops of hills.

Continuing its trend towards the Soviet system under the stress of civil war, the government is reported to have decided at a cabinet meeting to take over all businesses whose proprietors are "absent," and some 200 industries have already been seized provisionally.

France Plans Move For Italy Neutrality

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT

(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service.)

Paris, Aug. 3—A secret report on the Italian flyers forced down in French Algeria was brought to Paris by General Denain, chief of France's North African air force.

With this in hand, the radical French government considers itself to be in a strong position to exert pressure on Premier Mussolini in behalf of the proposed international accord pledging neutrality in Spain's civil war.

The secret report, brought here by airplane by General Denain, will be utilized by the French government in attempting to persuade Mussolini through diplomatic channels to join with Britain and France in the neutrality pledge, Universal Service learned.

PAPERS FOUND

Denain's document contains the findings of French authorities who questioned Italian pilots forced down in Algeria while on a flight to Spanish Morocco, presumably to deliver their machine-gun armed planes to insurgent forces there.

The report also is said to include references to certain papers found on the bodies of Italian airmen who were killed when one of the planes crashed.

Meanwhile, it was semi-officially reported, a French pronouncement will be forthcoming here, defining the position of Socialist Premier Leon Blum's government on the question of France furnishing guns and ammunition to the radical regime in Madrid.

The impression has been given out that this pronouncement will open the way for France to aid the Madrid government if it proves true, as reported from Rome, that the French neutrality proposal has been coldly received by Mussolini.

'SMOKE SCREEN'

Il Duce, it was reliably stated, will consider the French proposal favorably only if Germany is invited from the start to join in the neutrality accord on a basis of full equality with the other powers.

Indications are that the French government is opposed to inviting Germany at present, basing its new position on the circumstance that Britain, Italy and France are the primary powers in the Mediterranean, most directly affected by the events in Spain.

Furthermore, it was said French opposition to inviting Berlin is also occasioned by the lingering Locarno crisis prompted by Chancellor Hitler's remilitarization of the German Rhineland last March.

From representatives of the Spanish insurgent forces Universal Service learned that they regard the French proposal to Rome and London as being only a "smoke screen" to cover the shipments of high explosives and gas bombs allegedly being made to Spain by Soviet Russia.

TOWNSEND MAY VISIT LANDON; LODGE GUEST

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 3 (INS)—Drouth relief and the possibilities of gaining Republican seats in the United States Senate occupied Governor Alfred M. Landon today as he faced a heavy schedule of conferences.

There was a possibility, too, the Republican nominee for President might meet Dr. Francis E. Townsend, head of the $200-a-month old age pension plan. The pension promoter was coming here for a speech to Townsend clubs in the City Auditorium this afternoon and while he had no appointment with Landon, the governor's door is always open.

Heading the list for conferences here are Senator John G. Townsend, Jr., of Delaware and Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon, chairman and vice-chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee. They came from Chicago, where a few nights ago Steiwer headed the committee that nullified Col. Frank Knox of his nomination for the vice-presidency. They were to confer with Landon on the chances of Republican gains in the senate.

Young Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Massachusetts also had a conference scheduled with Landon. Lodge was nominated for the senate by Massachusetts Republican convention. He seeks the seat held by Senator Marcus Coolidge, Democrat.

On the drouth issue, Landon was to make a radio address to farmers this afternoon on a state-wide hook-up. He will discuss steps being taken to combat the drouth to relieve distress.

The governor also planned to discuss this issue with Louis J. Tabor, master of the National Grange. Tabor came here to ask Landon to support the Grange program for crop insurance as a means of providing drouth relief.

Young Republicans Open Landon Drive in East

New York, Aug. 3 (US)—Young Republicans in eight Eastern states will launch campaign drives in behalf of Alfred M. Landon and Colonel Frank Knox within the next two weeks. It was announced at national headquarters today.

A delegation of three young Republican leaders, headed by J. Kenneth Bradley, national chairman, will leave New York today on a speaking tour to set the drives in motion.

They will meet young Republican state and county leaders in Maine, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Bradley will be accompanied by Wallace Stearns, Eastern young Republican director, and Miss Margaret J. Hahn, director of young women's activities in the East.

1932 STRATEGY EXPERTS AID ROOSEVELT

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 3 (INS)—The little group of men who four years ago won President Roosevelt his party's nomination and then the election, assembled at the summer White House here today to debate how best to repeat the winning effort this fall.

Every action taken so far points to a decision by the President to "ride his luck" by following as closely as possible the formula that carried him into the White House in '32.

Already he has been through the Southern states and last week swung rapidly through four New England states and announced he would visit the others in the near future.

FOUR TOURS SUGGESTED

He plans a swing through New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio next week. The primary purpose is flood control, presidential trip authorized, but have political implications.

Immediately following that, the President is going on a month's inspection tour, this time of the drouth areas in Minnesota, North and South Dakota.

Tentative promises have been made to speak which indicate that late in September or early in October Mr. Roosevelt will make a stumping swing to the Pacific Coast and back.

Also, there has been talk of a trip down the Mississippi River, perhaps by boat, with a series of stops.

So far as party finances are concerned, National Chairman James A. Farley has intimated he wants the same sum he spent in 1932—slightly over $2,000,000.

1932 STRATEGISTS

The list of those here today disclosed they were the men who handled the '32 campaign.

First was Farley. Next was Frank C. Walker, who raised the money for the '32 presidential campaign, became party treasurer, and now is chairman of the finance committee.

Another was Charles Michelson, credited with blasting Herbert Hoover's hopes four years ago, and chief of the national publicity bureau.

Others at the council table included National Treasurer W. Forbes Morgan, National Secretary L. S. Roberts, Mary Dewson, director of women's activities, and Stanley High, religious editor attached to the national committee in promoting the "Good Neighbor League," explaining the New Deal philosophy in church circles.

The Boston Evening American gave New England the first news of the revolt in Spain through the brilliant operations of the International News Service and Universal Service.

The Boston Evening American coverage on the Spanish revolt has been complete in every detail. Events that have taken place every few moments during the early hours of that history-making hysteria across the sea were observed, reported, and flashed to our editorial rooms.

Karl H. Von Wiegand's masterful accounts of the real things that were happening told the world about the inside of Spain's revolt. H. R. Knickerbocker, internationally known correspondent, tells Boston Evening American readers what he sees from the seat of action. Lee Dickson from aboard the U. S. battleship Oklahoma sends daily stories on the progress of removing American citizens who are evacuating the war area. Arno Dosch-Fleurot, from Paris, has given the European picture of the armed flareup in Spain.

The story of the attempt on King Edward's life was a "BEAT" brought to readers by the Boston Evening American THREE HOURS AHEAD of any other New England newspaper.

'Rebels Driven Back!' Madrid Hears, Crowds Cheer and Sing

All pictures from International News Photograph Service.

News that the insurgents, advancing on the capital, had been hurled back was received with frenzied jubilation in Madrid. This scene shows group of young Loyalist troops cheering and singing in the streets. Spanish blood has flowed heavily in the streets of this section. Enthusiasm of these young soldiers which ran so high as this picture was taken was soon dampened, however, for a few hours later they were plunged into battle, many of them facing certain death.

Straw Vote Trend

G.O.P. Candidates Retain Leads

MASSACHUSETTS

Democratic candidates for United States senator and for governor gained a few votes over their Republican rivals, but only a few, on the 20th day of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser straw ballot.

With Medford the only community sounded on this 20th day, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican candidate for senator, was given 6,105 votes as against 76 for Governor Curley, while John W. Haigis, Republican candidate for governor, received 6,139 votes to 71 for State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley.

Thus far the standing, with mail votes included, shows:

For United States Senator:
Lodge 4705
Curley 3663

For Governor:
Haigis 4939
Hurley 3683

The straw ballot car is in Milton and Quincy today, so watch for it—and vote your choices.

MAINE

Once more, Republican candidates in Maine for United States senator and for governor crept farther ahead of their Democratic rivals in the 20th day of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser straw ballot.

In Ashland, Fort Fairfield and Mars Hill, the towns all located heavily for Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., Republican candidate for senator, as against his Democratic rival, Governor Louis J. Brann, and for Lewis O. Barrows, Republican candidate for governor, as against F. Harold Dubord, the Democrat.

At the end of the 20th day, with mail votes included, the standing shows:

For United States Senator:
White 3202
Brann 2485

For Governor:
Barrows 3020
Dubord 1924

Today the straw ballot car is working in Millinocket, Lincoln, Lee and Enfield. Watch for it—and cast your vote.

After an 8-hour conference today, counsel for Sherman announced that the next step would be a petition to the Supreme Court of the United States to review the case. There were hastings in Worcester during the execution on this and granted denials of the petitions were almost instant.

Attorney Moriss to move to small South Dakota county in the state government have already been.

The state supreme court refused to take action and Governor Ely declined to intervene. For the execution of Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Sherman, parents of the murdered man, arrived in Boston and Wednesday and Thursday.

Despite attempts by Sherman's counsel to obtain a stay, the execution moved just as regularly to the prison death room to remove him.

EXECUTIONER HERE

The arrival of Robert Elliott official executioner, is expected today. Irregularities have attended only on the day the official will present to the assemblage.

Legal witnesses will be Dr. Joseph L. McGarrigle, private physician of Dr. William J. Brodrick, and Dr. Thomas F. Tierney, surgeon-dentist of the Massachusetts National guard; Sheriff Oscar Richardson of Worcester county; Warden Francis J. W. Lanagan of state prison; Deputy-Warden Frank Gilman; Dr. Dr. Samuel Merrill, assistant prison physician and three representatives of the press.

Surprising even to prison officials, is Sherman's demeanor in the hours of life are fast slipping away.

He will go to rest and read. He sleeps. He sleeps. He sleeps peacefully.

To those who see him, he seems about to put one of a man-made on a few hours of the last ring of any value and hopefully.

Yesterday, when he was visited by his brother, Samuel Sherman, he was in good spirits.

Mary Astor Diary Decision Waited

mained film star-mother is staging a spectacular court battle.

George S. Kaufman, noted New York playwright, was the first prominent person identified with the theatrical industry to be subpoenaed today in the case.

Kaufman was served by attorneys for Thorpe on Catalina Island while preparing to go fishing with Irving Thalberg the producer.

Exact nature of Kaufman's expected testimony was uncertain as he was located he is not involved in the marital affair explaining he is merely a good friend of Miss Astor.

The "I love George" portion of Miss Astor's alleged diary was indicated to refer to a "George Kaufman" who became a "mystery man" after the playwright's announcement.

Superior Judge Goodwin J. Knight is expected to rule quickly on the propriety of evidence about the conduct of Miss Astor and Dr. Thorpe during the past year.

Should Judge Knight lift the ban, the diary of Miss Astor, in which she said it was better to put her heart, will be introduced into the record. Attorney Joseph Ambrose submitted.

Ambrose, counsel for Dr. Thorpe said the diary contains the name of nine men concerning whom has thrilled millions of women.

The physician's surgeon asserted that "immoral" conduct by Miss Astor proved him to obtain the divorce and custody of her daughter, Mariloy, by a second wife.

Other names brought into the trial so far are John Barrymore and a Mr. Goodrich? Neither of them was further identified and each linked into the case somewhat vaguely, as servants were asked if the men had been guests of Miss Astor since the divorce.

Miss Astor in reply to Dr. Thorpe, neither affirmed nor denied having written the asserted confessions of love to other men. She refused to look at a Pomeranian dog she had presented to Dr. Thorpe, saying that the animal was "unfortunate" thoughts enacted upon.

Dr. Thorpe, big game hunter and sportsman, was charged by one witness, Miss Nellie Richardson, Marilyn's nursemaid, with having entertained on less than four beautiful women in his bedroom overnight while Marilyn slept nearby, following the divorce.

Thorpe asserted conduct on his part is one of the points on which Miss Astor is seeking possession of Marilyn. Dr. Thorpe denied the nite conduct. Miss Astor steadfastly has maintained that her activities while married to Dr. Thorpe were beyond reproach.

Miss Astor underwent a brief direct examination when she took the stand at the last of the night court session Thursday. Roland Rich Woolley, her lawyer, also expected to complete the examination tomorrow after the trial resumes today after which she will be turned over to Dr. Thorpe's lawyers for cross examination.

The main story whose publication he drawn into the case were reportedly startled today over published reports that the lid might be tipped off the mysteries of their private lives in a manner that might come under the famous "morals" clauses of an screen contracts.

Several of them pointing out that even though they might be proved innocent of scandalous charges, the publicity could be cited in canceling their contracts.

Indiana Duo Wed Here

To steal a march on their friends at home, Miss Virginia O'Brien, of South Bend, Ind., and Clarence Manion, were married today at the Boston College Chapel. Manion is director of the National Emergency Council of Indiana and a professor of constitutional law at Notre Dame University.

'STEAL A MARCH'

South Bend Couple Wed Here

Because they wished "to steal a march" on their friends as well as in hope of offending clergymen, the Rev. Daniel Lord, S.J., Virginia O'Brien, attractive South Bend, Ind., girl, and Clarence E. Manion, Indiana director of the National Emergency Council, were married today in Boston College chapel, Chestnut Hill.

The ceremony took place at a nuptial mass at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Richard Metcalf, of Cambridge, was her matron of honor. Professor Paul Fenlon of Notre Dame's English department was best man for the bridegroom, who is professor of constitutional law at the famous mid-western university.

After the ceremony the bride explained that they had come to Boston and Boston College Chapel to be married because "we wished to steal a march on our South Bend friends."

"But our chief reason," she said, "was that we wanted to be married by our mutual friend, Father Lord (authority and lecturer on the drama), who is giving a summer course at Boston College."

Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien of South Bend, Ind., parents of the bride, and their son, John, Jr., headed the small group of guests at the services. Others were Miss Jane Smith of New York, Miss Mimi Fershaugh of South Bend and Mrs. George Metcalf of Cambridge.

The bride, who is 25 years old, is a graduate of Rosemont College, Philadelphia.

Manion, who is 38, is prominent in Indiana politics. He was permanent chairman of the 1930 Democratic state convention and was a candidate for his party's nomination for United States senator in 1934. During the balloting, he withdrew and threw his delegates back to the nominee, Senator Sherman Minton.

Several months later, Manion was appointed to the important post of Indiana director of the National Emergency Council.

Medium Spurs New Hunt for Maine Captain's Wife

Gilead, Me., Aug. 3: Listening again to Mrs. Margaret Newton, Portland medium, police searching for Mrs. Sarah Staples, 63-year-old missing wife of an Auburn police captain, moved 10 miles up the Androscoggin today to Bethel.

Seven boats and crews had been dragging the river below until the medium spoke again and said she believed the missing woman's body would be found at Bethel.

De fending their dependence on the woman medium, police said that their new spot in the river was where the body of Claude Goddard of Bethel, slaying victim, had been found two years ago on Mrs. Newton's advice.

GOES TO VIEW DOG

Mrs. Staples disappeared Tuesday from the Staples camp at Gilead and rumor all hope had been abandoned today that she is alive.

Meanwhile, the husband, Captain John Staples, was reported to have left for Crawford Notch, N. H., at the call to look at a Pomeranian dog found in the woods.

When Mrs. Staples disappeared she was accompanied by her brown Pomeranian, which is still missing. Doubt that the Crawford Notch dog is the missing animal was expressed, when it was reported to be black.

Today also the last of the 15 Auburn policemen, who came here with Chief Harry Rowe of the Auburn police to aid in the search, started back for Auburn.

BELIEVES TENSENESS

This relieved a "tense situation which had resulted from the presence of the Auburn officials and had caused friction between Chief Rowe and County Attorney Edgar W. Abbott.

Offer of state aid which might be called in the investigation was made today to Sheriff William Frothingham by Chief Walter H. Towle of the Maine state police.

Chief Towle and Lieutenant Leon Spinney conferred at length with Sheriff Frothingham and County Attorney Abbott, the latter stating he believed the sheriff's office is doing everything possible to solve the case.

He was found not guilty of operating to endanger by Judge W. Lloyd Allen in Newton court. Judge Allen ruled that there was no probable cause onthe two counts of manslaughter.

Real Rabbits Used On Dog Track, SPCA Charges

Destruction of a racing dog training track at Dighton on the alleged claim that live rabbits were being used, was disclosed today by officials of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

The track, 500 feet in circumference and situated about a mile and a half from the famed dog track in Dighton, was operated, according to the society officials, on the property of Herbert Wyatt, in Maple avenue.

Today, however, Wyatt denied that live rabbits were being used. They were dead, he said, when their bodies were hooked to the traveling arm which was propelled around the track at fast speed through use of a hand windlass.

Society officials and Dighton state police seized the bodies of several rabbits, on which autopsies will be performed to determine the cause of death. Police said they had learned 10 dog-racing stables at the deserted Dighton track, formerly their dogs were Wyatt's place.

Calls Roosevelt 'Red'

FR. COUGHLIN SCORES HIS POLICIES

By ALAN C. FRAZER

New Bedford, Aug. 3—Father Charles E. Coughlin, addressing 8000 at an open-air meeting here after a speech before 25,000 at East Providence, bluntly referred to President Roosevelt as "The Communist."

He said:

"I was instrumental in sitting the White House of Hoover and his rugged individualism. So help me God, I'll take the Communist from the chair once occupied by Washington."

The leader of the National Union for Social Justice declared "a party of Lincoln, a Democratic platform" and the Federal Constitution, as well, were up for sunrise—the Constitution "at a time down and a dollar when they cost you."

"There was once a Judas Iscariot who sold his Christ for 30 pieces of silver," he said.

"I am not accusing Mr. Roosevelt of selling out for 30 pieces of silver, but when his father was making his will, he would not entrust Franklin with his money but we are trusting him with billions of dollars today."

The radio orator also excoriated Herbert Hoover, and said:

"If Hoover had been re-elected, there would be more bullet holes in the White House than could be counted with an sliding machine."

Father Coughlin told his audience here that the good neighbor policy of the present administration was helping Japan and sending textile workers on the WPA.

Members of the American Legion formed a guard for him here at his request to keep back persons wishing to shake his hand which had already been made sore by too many greetings.

BRANDS "BRAIN TRUST"

At East Providence, R. I., Father Coughlin denounced President Roosevelt as "the commissar of promises" and the great mistake, and branded members of the brain trust as "atheists, red and pink Communists, and Frankfurters of destruction."

The Rhode Island throng, of which all but a handful were standing under a blazing sun at the Andrews Stadium, received the District priest in his most impassioned oratory.

When the crowd demanded that he mention Congressman William Lemke of North Dakota, third party candidate for President, he complied, lauding Lemke and presenting Thomas O'Brien of Boston, also essential candidate.

O'Brien reiterated criticism made by Father Coughlin of the newspapers and specifically of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. O'Brien spoke in Cleveland Saturday.

Three weeks ago the same crowd fainted. This was the first statewide mass meeting to be held in the National from anywhere in the country.

Father Coughlin not only denounced President Roosevelt as "broken promises," high taxes, advocacy of the World Court and good policies, but called Ex-President Herbert Hoover "honest but ignorant."

Communism and regimentation also commanded his fire, but he declared that Hoover and his individualism were worse than Stalin and the Communists.

Father Coughlin, wore a sick rose in his lapel. While traveling between speeches in New England, his radio plans have changed on the strength of several unscheduled stops to build his home across from his well-wishers.

Father Coughlin repeatedly professed to have forgotten the name of the Republican presidential candidate on his first visit to Rhode Island and then aroused the throng, but he was unable easier on Hoover than Landon. "Don't let President Roosevelt," he scoffed at "Landon's radio voice."

"In 1932 this nation voted against Hoover but did not vote for Roosevelt," he said. "The nation was simply determined there must be a new rating of human rights, that human rights must prevail over financial rights.

"As far back as 1932, however, those of us who dared mention that were dubbed a 'lunatic fringe.' Well, then, so did Jesus Christ belong to the lunatic fringe.

"He said he supported Roosevelt in 1932 because he believed conditions of real Hoover policies would be essential for relief, but he said the President's gold policy and banking laws disillusioned him.

"Then I knew," he said, "that we had elected a fine 'promising young man to the Presidency of the United States. I knew he had not the courage of his convictions and that the prayer he made on his inauguration had ricocheted from the clouds above him.

"I decided then that America was going to retain its democracy though we had to fight for it.

"I made up my mind that I would use all the power I possess to save the Constitution—with which there is nothing wrong—against this new commissar of promises, with whom everything is wrong."

"KEY TO MONEY CHANGERS"

Father Coughlin also denounced the Federal Reserve System and said President Roosevelt and his advisers had driven the people out of the temples and given the key to the money changers, "the key being fashioned in the shape of a double cross."

"We're not going to be regimented in this nation and told we are to have two or 200 churches," he said. "We're not going to have as many as we please, adore God as we please, and not going to stand for the dictation of any Stalin or Tugwell as to the advisability of opening up our church doors."

The "New Deal," he said, had produced a new kind of love for the poor man.

"FORGOTTEN MAN" TAXED

"The Forgotten Man has been remembered," he shouted. "The New Deal remembers him in every gallon of gasoline he buys, every loaf of bread he purchases, every pound of butter he consumes—remembers him in hidden taxes—and places a mortgage on the United States in favor of the international bankers.

"The Communists want to communize and nationalize. Individuals against the Constitution, and the Democrats and Republicans want to communize the Federal Reserve or national banking—which is likewise against the Constitution.

"I charge the Republicans and Democrats both with being unconstitutional in their platforms just as much as the Communists. They say we want inflation. What we want is to restore to Congress the power of issuing money and regulating the value of money."

BLAMES TUGWELL

Father Coughlin blamed Rexford G. Tugwell, chief of the Resettlement Administration, "for trying to destroy us into prosperity" and declared:

"We say to God, 'Give us our daily bread,' after having cast it back right into His face, last year.

"Oh, look at that scene at Washington. Surrounded by atheists, red and pink Communists, surrounded by Frankfurters of destruction—see if you want to follow that kind of New Deal which is digging us into a ditch out of which we could never emerge."

"I am not endorsing Bill Lemke but he has endorsed the 16 principles of social justice so what could I do about it? Bill is honest. I know him and can vouch for him. I didn't know those others I went for. He is one of the finest attorneys ever to be graduated out of Yale.

"As for his running mate, he comes from the solid soil of New England, has been a labor leader, has championed the poor, knows what it's all about. He was a brilliant graduate of Harvard, he is one of your own flesh and blood—our old Tommy Charles O'Brien.

"Don't pay any attention to reports about my telephoning to Europe. I never telephoned to Europe. Don't pay any attention to reports that some people would like to take away my collar and place it in the morgue alongside Benedict Arnold.

HIT AT "STORIES"

"And don't pay any attention to reports that Bishop Gallagher of Detroit is a pussyfooter. He's not!

"Those stories were invited to split Priest and Bishop, to split people and priest and put us all back in the laps of the money changers' servants."

Father Coughlin announced he would resume his regular Sunday radio addresses in September but expected to speak from all parts of the country, instead of regularly from Royal Oak, Mich., as he will be traveling in the campaign.

"So help me God, I will take a Communist from a chair once occupied by Washington"—thus the Reverend Charles E. Coughlin in action at New Bedford, where he launched the most bitter assault he has ever made on President Roosevelt, in which he branded the Chief Executive of the United States as a "Communist."

"I'LL DRIVE HIM FROM WHITE HOUSE"

FASCISM IN BAY STATE, LABOR MEN TOLD

New Bedford, Aug. 3—John F. Gatelee, of Springfield, president of the Massachusetts branch of the American Federation of Labor, today charged that Fascism exists in western Massachusetts.

In an address before 300 delegates to the 51st annual state convention, Gatelee urged getting rid "of all forms of Fascism."

He said:

"In Western Massachusetts we have groups of semi-military police banded together by the chambers of commerce and employers for the sole purpose of maintaining 'law and order.'

URGES ORGANIZATION

"It might be well if the state branch of the A. F. of L. organized a few groups of its own.

"These self-constituted groups have always been a menace to our properly constituted government. They are too often exploited by some smart Fascist who imposes control against the wishes of the majority.

"It might be a good thing to get rid of all of them."

Treasurer Robert Watt, reporting on the bill to raise the compulsory school age, attacked Education Commissioner James G. Reardon as "young, unknown and inexperienced."

As the session got underway, a stiff battle loomed over the two types of unions—the old American Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers' organization.

SESSION BEGINS

Delegates went into the session with a declaration by union and convention officials that the unemployment problem "will never be solved" until reduction in the hours of labor goes hand in hand with the introduction and development of machinery.

Chief interest in this year's convention is the interest that has gripped labor everywhere in the nation since John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers swung the whole weight of his decision over the American Federation of Labor in the battle of the two organizations' supremacy.

SIX-HOUR DAY URGED

Indications were today that discussion over the horizontal or craft type of organization, typified by the American Federation of Labor, and the vertical or industrial union proposition of the United Workers, would overshadow all other convention problems.

On the eve of the convention opening, officials released a joint report which asserted that while "between 70 per cent and 75 per cent in the direction of normalcy, employment is but 46 per cent of the normal."

A six-hour day and five-day week were urged to increase employment and to "undo the damaged morale of the men and women of our country who have been on relief for an unjustified unemployment."

A proposition to set up a state labor party appeared doomed to defeat in the convention. A poll on the subject, with 189 of 435 affiliated organizations participating, brought 15,145 votes against such a party to only 4884 in favor.

FOUR SEEK GATELEE'S POST

Featuring the opening day of the convention was campaigning for the office of president, to which the present incumbent, John F. Gatelee, does not seek re-election. The election comes Friday, closing day of the meeting.

The leading candidates in the field at present are John Carroll, business agent of the Cement Finishers' Union of Boston; Charles B. Campfield, president of the Boston Central Labor Union; John C. Carvey, president of the Boston Carmen's Union, and William E. G. Batty of New Bedford, business manager of the Loom Fixers' Union.

Lindy Furious Over Publicity Says Host

Copenhagen, Aug. 3 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was reported by his Danish host today to be "already furious over the publicity the Danish press tries to give him."

The American flier, accompanied by Mrs. Lindbergh, arrived last night from Berlin to visit Captain Andreas Dam.

"The telephones have chimed steadily since his arrival," Captain Dam declared. "He does not understand why he cannot be left alone as in England."

Lindbergh was understood to be planning to leave Copenhagen tomorrow for England to return Sunday for the opening of a medical congress at which he will exhibit the "mechanical heart" which he invented with Dr. Alexis Carrell of Rockefeller Institute, New York.

Lindbergh was driven to the Danish Rockefeller Institute this morning by Dam and introduced to Dr. Alfred Fischer, research expert.

The flier then began unpacking his mechanical heart which arrived several weeks ago in several cases.

$116,294,240 U. S. Deficit for July

Washington, Aug. 3 (INS)—The administration wound up the first month of the new fiscal year with a deficit of $116,294,240, the Treasury disclosed today.

A slight drop in the public debt was registered during July. The Treasury opened the current fiscal period—July 1—with a public debt of $35,778,542,493. On July 31 this had declined to $35,442,795,237.

Income tax collections were $39,120,833 compared with $23,192,504 for July last year.

Collections of miscellaneous internal revenue were also considerably higher than during the same month in 1935, $200,807,726 against $164,624,110 last year. A gain was also noted in customs receipts.

Today's Boon-Doggle

Hugo is one of those Infinitesimal towns in the semi-desert wastes of eastern Colorado. Its total population is 752 persons, of whom, not more than a handful were on the government relief rolls when the Works Progress Administration went into operation.

Clearly two or three projects, costing a total of a few thousand dollars would have sufficed to meet the one worth while needs of this community, but Hugo despite its diminutive size, took big ideas. It submitted an elaborate program, and its leading citizens must still be astounded at the readiness of the Washington officials who approved it.

In all, President Roosevelt has approved two projects to cost the Federal Treasury $96,000 at Hugo. This would represent a governmental outlay of $127.50 for every man, woman and child in the town.

Local officials, of course, were not so wisely duped and to date only a few of those projects have actually been undertaken, but Hugo quite naturally is still counting on that if Franklin D. Roosevelt be reelected, it will ultimately get its $96,000. It would not be impossible to expect any one in the administration ranks to discourage this hope at this time.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Then gas rises to your stomach, you get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sunk, sour and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Dizzy Spells

Come from Constipation

Your doctor will tell you that nine times out of ten dizziness and headaches mean that your body is being poisoned by constipation. Nujol prevents them by removing the cause.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach, and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle and so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Just try Nujol regularly for the next month and see if you don't feel better than you ever suspected you could.

Ask your druggist for Nujol.

'Uncle, Give Us Bread'

HOW G.P.U. RULES SOVIET BY FEAR

Arne Strom is a Danish poultry expert, who had lived in Canada and the United States. He was engaged by the Soviet government to help improve its state farms.

Accompanied by his wife and child, Mr. Strom went to Soviet Russia imbued with a deep sympathy for the Communist experiments.

He spent a year off the beaten track, on a state collective farm and traveling widely throughout the country.

Everywhere he went in Russia he heard the cry from a starving and miserable people, "Uncle, give us bread!" He returned to Denmark utterly disillusioned.

With the pitiable cry of the tortured millions, "Uncle Give Us Bread!" as the title, Mr. Strom has published the record of his experiences.

The book was translated from Danish and issued in England in the spring of 1936.

"Uncle, Give Us Bread!" is an unadorned and unique picture of life under the Soviet regime. It is suffused with a profound love for the helpless Russian people ground down by a merciless dictatorship.

ARTICLE SEVEN

By ARNE STROM

Never before had I realized what an extremely useful little object a saucepan is. This was my first really useful lesson since we arrived in Russia.

I decided to journey to a neighboring town—Borisoglebsk—a devil of a name it seemed to me—to do my shopping there.

First I had to have a kind of identification certificate to state who I was. A foreign expert lawfully travelling in search of a saucepan and some food-stuffs, which I really deserved and had worked for.

A document was written on a poor brown paper and addressed to the highest authority, namely that town's party secretary. And in that unknown town of Borisoglebsk.

It was garnished with rubber-stamps in blue and red. How all those slips of paper used to annoy me, but I soon got to realize how very useful they were, for they opened the way for me to the holiest places in the Soviet State.

Marushka and I started on our expedition the next morning. Both had been up before five to buy our tickets—a slip precaution it seemed to me, until I saw the long rows of waiting peasants in front of the ticket office.

"Awful People"

I explained to Marushka that in future we need only apply to the G. P. U. guard, and get one of their pantry to buy the tickets. She squinted up at me and murmured something about "awful people." I took little or possible to do with the G. P. U.

"I said forcibly: "Awful people?" ("They're awful people"), she whispered.

That local slow train to Borisoglebsk was commonly called "the snake," "the old woman," a nickname which showed the spite of hundreds of these dear Russian peasants.

From the huge platform at Borisoglebsk the crowd was so thick that it was difficult to push one's way out of the station.

As my excellent interpreter could not read what was written on the slip of paper which I had brought with me, and did not want to own up to this fact, I said that I would go to the G. P. U. guard and get all information.

We found several ordinary soldiers there, but they could not help me. They carefully studied my piece of brown paper and spelled out its words.

Brutal Punishment

One of the soldiers walked towards a high white door and asked us to follow him. Marushka was pale as a corpse, and seemed ready for the worst. We were left just inside the door, while the soldier walked towards a baize-covered table and put my identification paper in front of a smart, uniformed man of the Carmera type.

This person took no notice either of us or of the scrap of paper, for he was busily interrogating a bewildered, cringing individual who stood trembling before him with his hands to his.

Suddenly Carmera rose, seized the sinner's beard with his left hand, pulled him forward and gave him three awful cuts on the back of his neck with all his strength, using the edge of his right hand.

It looked as if he were trying to behead the man with his bare hands. I can only describe my feeling as sinuousness and I coughed quietly several times.

"Drooling, drooling" ("Enough, enough"), gasped the criminal.

It must have been by mistake that I was allowed to witness this scene, for I noticed that Carmera, having glanced at my scrap of brown paper, also "got kind of unsettled."

He made us a particularly friendly sign to come nearer, and asked us about Marushka what he could do for us.

His big table was heaped with papers, and on top of them were two fowls with their heads torn off. One was half eaten.

Branded Bloodsucker

Carmera told me in a confused, gentle voice of the many cases that this cursed scoundrel had stolen these two fowls. He was one of these damned former Kulaks, who ought to be exterminated as soon as possible, everyone of them. They owe their down a stroke of decent work in all their lives, and had only defrauded and plundered the people.

"But now we Communists are going to show them that their blood-sucking of the Russian proletariat is over for good."

It was not till we were safely outside the house that Marushka translated all this to me.

I gleaned at the Kulak, but at once checked the sweet smile; he was the most sinister-looking fellow I had ever set eyes upon in all my life. And his fingers were greasy and smeared with chicken blood. He had probably caught literally redhanded eating the freshly killed chickens.

"I don't suppose people do that sort of thing for fun," I said to Carmera, and I think Marushka translated it to him, for there was something about my being delighted to see all this.

What could she do, poor thing? She was a Russian and she trembled the whole time like an aspen. I said to her sharply:

"Ask him where the offices of the party committee are and which is the shortest way there."

Visibly relieved at hearing that this was all we wanted Carmera began telling her how we were to go.

The eighth chapter of Arne Strom's interesting book will appear in Tuesday's Boston Evening American.

HOLY EXHIBIT MOVES ON TO WORCESTER

Today the Holy Land Exhibit was on its way to Worcester following a 28-day stay in Boston where it was on view in Horticultural Hall.

At midnight last night, the doors of Horticultural Hall were closed and a score of workmen began to dismantle the mechanical marvel which has attracted the attention of more than 50,000 persons while in Boston.

The exhibit, which depicts the Life of Christ and affords a panoramic look of the Holy Land during the first century, is on a world tour.

STREAM OF VISITORS

All day yesterday a steady stream of visitors passed through the hall, viewing the exhibit, which required twenty-three years to create.

The last ticket to the exhibit, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser for the benefit of the Christmas Basket Fund was purchased by Dr George Dorsey of Revere.

During the exhibit's stay here, persons from all walks of life, Catholic, Protestant and Jew alike, gave high praise to the exhibition.

DISMANTLE EXHIBIT

The work of dismantling and packing the hundreds of articles of the exhibit and placing it in a specially railroad baggage car, used only a couple of times annually, began at 12:01 o'clock this morning.

The Grant Brothers, creators of the masterpiece and British lineage, assisted by Miss Mary Grant, supervised every detail of packing the mechanical marvel, carefully numbering the stock.

Before leaving, the Grant brothers issued the following statement to the Boston Evening American:

"It is with deep regret that we leave your fair city of Boston.

"We have thoroughly enjoyed our four-week stay here. We also discovered that the appreciation Bostonians showed for our exhibit was greater than any other city.

"CITY OF CULTURE"

"As boss, we both were told that Boston was a city of culture and art and our own personal experience has proven to us that it is a reality.

"We hope that our visits in other cities in the United States will be as pleasant as our stay here.

"In closing, I wish to thank the clergy of all faiths for their kind co-operation and especially those that paid us a visit and gave praise through the columns of the Boston Evening American."

HINGHAM MILK PRICE REVOLT

Determining price-fixing as ordered by the State Milk Control Board as unconstitutional and illegal, Assessors Maple, Tolman, heads offices of Hingham, today state refused to compute the tax rate as the board ruled that all items of the store selling milk and cream for consumption off the premises must be included.

The objections to the board by Tolman were contained in a protest letter to J. Carl, administrator of the board. The tentative town official stated in his letter that he would urge all Hingham milk dealers to fight what he branded as "legal persecution" in an effort to put them on a little easy money's.

Tolman's opposition is based on two points. First, he believes the entire idea of price-fixing and general regimentation is economically unsound and foreign to American ideals. Second he is of the opinion the board is functioning contrary to the statutes that brought it into being.

Tolman asserts that if President Roosevelt and his "brain trust" hadn't had the complete support of Utopian senators, the Congress, wealth never would have enacted "any such foolish legislation as that of Chapter 376 of the Acts of 1934."

'HATCHET GIRL' NEAR COLLAPSE IN HER CELL

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Bayonne, N. J., Aug. 5.—Gladys MacKnight, high-powered 17-year-old high-school graduate, and her "boy friend," Donald Wightman, 18, woodsy pastimed music pupil in jail today on the authorities moved to bring them to trial for the brutal hatchet murder of the girl's mother, Mrs. Flora MacKnight, in her home Friday.

The girl's diffident, hard-boiled attitude slipped away from her like a discarded cloak. She wants to see her father, and besides, hearted Edgar W. MacKnight, is going to visit her. Her attitude will be that of "any father toward his daughter."

Both prisoners have expressed regret over the killing; the girl frankly blaming "that brute," Donald was penitent from the moment he was seized by police. They are quartered in the Hudson County Jail in Jersey City, awaiting action by the grand jury which convenes next month.

If the facts warrant it I will ask for a murder indictment when the grand jury meets, September 17," Prosecutor James I. Colligan announced this afternoon.

Only one hopeful appeared through which the "hating youth" couple could escape the electric chair. That was the possibility the state cannot prove the value was premeditated murder.

Gladys, to her story to the police, maintained that she had taken the hatchet for self-protection, but when down, came out and that the ferocious assault on Mrs. MacKnight had been carried out in her fury of biting rage. Moreover, shortly before the crime was committed she and Donald drank a few beers.

Captain of Detectives Thomas McGrath informed Prosecutor O'Regan that some secretly carpet badly rending tackle, down had been found in the MacKnight home. This helped to support Gladys' story.

The prosecution had told in advance his decision, whether to ask the death penalty for the girl, would be considered by "eminent criminal lawyers have handled in years and in the two years' lessons in a short and busy the radio.

Gladys' attorney, H. Lewis Kennedy, declined to comment on the prosecutor's decision.

He also said Gladys had requested permission to attend her mother's funeral, scheduled for Sunday night, but that he did not think it could be arranged.

Kennedy indicated that the "confessing" would be withdrawn when the young couple are placed on trial. He said:

"The girl is normal, perhaps more intelligent than the average girl and perhaps a little willful. She is one of those ultra-modern girls.

"It is my impression she did not kill her mother."

Her Grief Comes Too Late

Gladys MacKnight, who confessed the hatchet murder of her mother in Bayonne, N. J., begged today that she be permitted to go to Mrs. MacKnight's funeral.

LABOR OFFERS COMPROMISE TO LEWIS

Washington, Aug. 5 (AP)—A compromise proposal to delay a showdown was made to the American Federation of Labor executive council today at the opening of its trial of John L. Lewis and 11 associates in the committee for industrial organization on charges of "insurrection and rebellion."

Although the proceedings had been scheduled to start in mid-afternoon, the council decided to hear Henry Ohl, Jr., president of the Wisconsin Federation of Labor, this morning before John P. Frey, the prosecutor, presented his case.

Ohl proposed that the Lewis committee confine its activity to the steel and rubber industries, that the A. F. of L. support Lewis in organization efforts in those fields, and that the issue of industrial versus craft unionism be submitted to the Federation convention next November in Tampa.

Chairs of the "defendants" were vacant, as angry members of the council gathered to try Lewis and his aides, who advocated industrial unionism as against organization by crafts.

The Ohl proposal was adopted by the Wisconsin Federation in convention several weeks ago.

A day unit of the Special Service Squad, known in the Boston Police Department as "Triple S," was inaugurated today.

Sergeant Joseph F. Condon and Detectives Dennis J. Riordan, Albert Hunt and William Jennings were assigned to the new squad to begin their duties at once.

With 1700 arrests to their credit, since the "Triple S" was instituted last January, the original squad has scored high praise from Deputy Superintendent William W. Livingston, in charge of the unit.

Today Acting Superintendent John M. Anderson, in charge of the police force during the absence of Acting Superintendent William Pallen, now on vacation, gave the new day unit a "pep" talk.

The men were told to watch the banks, be on the lookout for pickpockets and to guard closely congested areas of the city.

FOIL DOG JAIL BREAK

Idaho Plans Alibi in Court Trial

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP)—Deputy Sheriff Oren J. Tuttle thwarted what might have been a dash for liberty yesterday on the part of Idaho, the Brockport dog blamed for a barge canal drowning.

Idaho, was being examined by Dr. William H. Mahoney, veterinarian at the Dog Protective Association's farms, when the dog apparently tired of being under observation and penned up in a kennel, jumped from a table and ran to the road.

Tuttle, patrolling that vicinity about 10 minutes later, saw Idaho and sailed in him. He said the dog came willingly.

As Victor Fortunte, 22, owner of Idaho, prepares to defend his pet Wednesday before Justice of the Peace Homer B. Benedict in Brockport, Harry A. Seaione, his attorney, announced that an "alibi" dog has been found and will be taken to court if a subpoena can be obtained. Seaione says this other dog resembles Idaho.

The vote being conducted by a Brockport weekly newspaper today showed 120 favoring destruction of Idaho and 104 favoring acquittal.

'Peekin' Will' Quits War On Nudists

Long Valley, N. J., Aug. 3 (AP)—Farmer Will Searles called off girls today and issued a decree that anybody "be they wearin' decent clothes or all dressed naked" could tromp all over Schooley's mountain for all he cared.

Thus did Will blow retreat in the war he had waged this summer and last against a camp next to his property.

Searles said they were nudists and he did his best to pave and threatened them on of his neck of the woods.

Those in charge of the camp, named Peekin' Will, although it was a "health camp" where the sun and nonexistence came to hold up clothes.

And that was where the forces of law and order-keepers threw down Will, although the Interstate Utilities Association and Arthur W. Brayton received a like amount. The New England Telephone & Telegraph Company filed a return showing it had paid Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall $1000 for services during the legislative session.

Charles Edward Gladding, Jr., received a fee of $1000 from White Fuel Corporation and John S. Moore obtained the same fee same source.

YOUTH STABBED PAIR SEIZED

Two hours after Francis McNulty, 21, of Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, had been stabbed through the abdomen and hurled from a speeding taxicab into Fellows street, Roxbury, today, two alleged assailants were arrested.

Sergeant Frank Maguire of Dudley street station later also took the cab driver into custody for questioning.

McNulty, according to the police, identified Joseph Sanfilippo, 25, and Frank Ford, 32, both of Massachusetts avenue, South End, as his attackers.

The pair were arrested by Sergeant Leo Hoban of the Special Service squad in a drug store on Washington street, South End, and taken to the Boston city Hospital.

There the victim and his brother Joseph, also of the South End, with a bruised face, allegedly identified the two men.

They were locked up at the Dudley street police station.

Ford, police records show, was arrested in a South End night club.

Someone raced to the McNulty home and notified his brother who was in bed. He dressed and rushed to the scene.

Joseph McNulty knocked unconscious. Frances was tossed into the taxicab, driven to Fellows street, where he was hurled into the street, police said.

The two arrested will be arraigned in Roxbury court, tomorrow.

Fighting Prisoner Halted

Frank Ford, of the South End was subdued after giving Sergeant Joseph Condon and Patrolman John Ryan, of Station 9, a hard battle. He was arrested in connection with the stabbing of Francis McNulty, of Roxbury. McNulty is reported to have been stabbed in the abdomen and tossed from a speeding taxicab.

Graves Battles For School Post

The first legal moves toward reinstatement of Dr. S. Monroe Graves, ousted superintendent of Wellesley schools, were expected today.

On Friday the discharged educator handed his keys over to the school committee.

Today Attorney James Built, counsel for Dr. Graves, prepared to file a writ of mandamus in Norfolk county at Dedham to compel the Wellesley school committee to put him back on the job.

Dr. Graves' petition for reinstatement will be based on the grounds he was removed without cause or a public hearing.

The removal of Dr. Graves caused a storm of protest among townspeople and well-known educators.

The school committee asked his resignation as early as a year ago on various charges. Late in February the doctor was notified by the committee. A hearing was scheduled. Many witnesses rallied to the defense of Dr. Graves. As far as he would say, the ousted man appeared against him.

Reinstatement of Dr. Graves would place his school committee men in an embarrassing predicament, each one being personally liable for the salary being paid Edwin C. Mims, who succeeded the dismissed doctor.

Doom Nickel Fare By Bus Decision

Hundreds of bus patrons living in the Summerside and Readville sections of Hyde Park must continue to pay an extra five-cent fare for a ride from their homes to the department of public utilities ruled today in dismissing the application of the Boston Elevated Railway Company to operate buses between Clearly square, Hyde Park, and the Dedham line of the privately owned system.

The Elevated sought to take over the bus line from Hyde Park and start operating for many years and on which a five-cent fare is charged.

Charges Prisoner Posed as G-Man

Stopped for a state trooper in Worcester with Bukrym, 25, of Oak street, Providence, R. I., posed as a federal secret service agent and proudly displayed his badge, it was charged today.

Trooper Charles A. MacCarthy arrested both on automobile speeding charges.

Check-up by federal authorities revealed no such person in the secret service and a charge of impersonating a federal officer was lodged against the man, now in Lodham jail.

After a search of Bukrym's rooms in Providence, authorities said they found several types of badges and loaded revolver, 25 rounds of ammunition and a variety of law books.

Bukrym, when stopped by MacCarthy, said he was pursuing a man who had passed two red lights and sped past the trooper said.

The badges, Bukrym showed bore the words "federal detective, secret service" and the initials "9-D-17-M-27-35," the trooper alleged.

Asked to explain figures, Bukrym said he "is to find the public," according to McCarthy.

Betty Alden on Beacon Hill

By BETTY ALDEN

THIS IS THE SEASON for straw votes and all sorts of pre-election balloting, and socialites have caught the fever as much as every one else . . .

For the past few weeks the summer colonists at Newport have been busily scribbling their ballots to select the prettiest girl and handsomest man and so forth . . . The result of the voting will be announced and the prizes awarded at the Newport Hospital Fair tomorrow . . .

MRS. RICHARD K. THORNDIKE, JR.

Just as this contest is coming to an end, we are beginning to hear of a similar one to select the Garbo and Gables of the North Shore . . . The contest is being conducted at the Casino in Magnolia, and though the results of only two evenings' voting are in, these early returns, as the political commentators say, "should give us an indication of future trends" . . .

As matters now stand, Louise Stevens, Barbara Brewer and Marian Lawrence are leading the field for the title of prettiest girl on the North Shore . . . but there are many others who may forge ahead before the voting closes in September . . .

Tommy Leiter, Sewall Barrell and Randolph Charrington have carried the "first few precincts" for the handsomest man, but Charlie Sturgis, Hugh Minturn and Rufus Sewall are decidedly in the running . . .

The wardrobe which Nancy Cochrane brought back from Europe has given her a good start against the other contenders for the title of best-dressed girl . . . She has formidable rivals in Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church, Jr., Mrs. R. Lemuel Sewall and Mrs. Joseph Woods . . .

Lindsey Dexter, who is now only seen around the shore on week-ends, as he is working in Nashua, N. H.; Charlie Sturgis and several others are selecting their shirts and tying their cravats with greater care these days for there are many who think them eligible for "best-dressed man" . . .

Judging by the early returns, Mrs. Wallace Pierce, Catharine Pentecost or Marie Stevenson will be chosen the most vivacious girl . . .

Some of these early favorites in the balloting were at the Casino Saturday evening, dancing among the innumerable dark horses . . .

• • •

BARBARA BREWSTER and Charlie Sturgis were chatting seriously together in a corner of the cocktail room, while at a nearby table Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Church Jr., the N. Penrose Hallowells Jr., Alice Burrage and a whole crowd of young marrieds appeared to be in the gayest of spirits . . .

Mrs. Church, Alice Burrage and Mrs. Philip C. Wrenn, Jr., have all adopted the white cardigan sweater style . . . each wearing one snugly buttoned right up to her chin, in lieu of an evening wrap or coat . . . Mrs. Wrenn's went right on over a lovely white silk evening dress, but the other two wore theirs over tailored linen dresses . . .

Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., dropped in after a long and breezy day at Marblehead where she watched for the results of the races in which her famous father-in-law is such a conspicuous figure . . . She looked as attractive as ever in a white linen suit with pique revers and vestee . . .

Kitty Talbot was escorted by Eddie Nash while Ruthie Williams dined with Betsy Shrigley's party and tripped the light fantastic with Dick Sprague innumerable times . . . She looked very winsome in a bright red dotted swiss, made in rather demure style, with little red bows in her curls . . .

Lucy Rasbool Thorndike and her husband, Dick, who are among the younger couples entertaining at dinner Thursday evening in connection with the Race Week dinner dance at the Eastern Yacht Club, were at the Casino with another young couple . . . Still others glimpsed through the candle light were Mr. and Mrs. John Draper Gannett, who, by the way, had entertained the Thomas Gannetts (Annie Cole) Friday evening as a homecoming celebration on the bride and groom's return from Europe . . . Also Lindsey Dexter and Standish Van Vourhis, Louis Baer, Marie Palmer with Fenno Schenk, and Mrs. Jane Struthers and other members of the Foster family who were in a party with the Hank Bowes . . .

• • •

Mrs. Clifton Bremer of Milton is spending the summer abroad and during her absence her daughter Leslie is making short visits here and there with her friends on the shore . . . She has recently been spending some time with her future sister-in-law, Arielle Moseley . . .

• • •

The annual invitation women's tennis tournament which is taking place all this week at East Hampton, L. I., has attracted some of the nation's top ranking women players . . . and Boston will be represented on the roll by Sarah Palfrey Fabyan and Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson . . .

Tomorrow evening the visiting players will be entertained at an informal dinner followed by bridge given by Mrs. William H. Woodin, widow of the tennis enthusiast who donated the gold cup for tennis singles which was won twice by Helen Wills Moody . . .

Infant Saviour Guild at Bridge

It takes more than a clear sunny day to lure South Shore colonists from their afternoon of bridge. Particularly when the charity fund of the Guild of Infant Saviour has to be aided and any number of underprivileged children in need of milk.

The old tit-for-tat attitude characterized the half thousand or more loyal guild supporters who flocked to the mid-summer bridge at Priday at the Hatherly Country Club. Mrs. William McDermott, who's been for a Canadian vacation shortly, greeted all arrivals . . . her green and white print was topped with a large-brimmed hat of green baby . . . carnations of the same shade trimming the underskirt of the attractive chapeau. Sharing the spotlight was Mrs. Andrew J. Foster, incoming guild president, whose printed frock was violet chiffon and her coat square boxy sported a flat tailored bow.

Entertain

Daughter Eleanor, sophomore at Trinity College, was on hand for her waitress duty, while Mary, who adores Trinity's senior class in the fall, entertained Bee Dillon of New York, who's spending a few days with the Porters in Belmont.

Mary chose a tunic number of pink tulle . . . with this she wore navy accessories and Bee wore a smoothly tailored number of dark linen a Scotch beret atop her coiffure.

Mrs. Joseph J. Driscoll entertained a table of guests, Mrs. Thomas Lavelle, Mrs. John McCue and Mrs. James Powers . . . busy matrons during the summer, swimming parties and all kinds of summer activities.

Mrs. Mary Corcoran, Mary King and Mrs. Daniel Lynch should go a trifle orchid for their unexcelled work for the guild. They were on deck as usual at Friday's affair, counting change and selling chances.

Mrs. Thomas P. Feeny of Medford brought along Molly Healy, Mrs. Anthony De Prato and Mrs. James Eisner, the quartet spending the afternoon busily doubling and redoubling.

Mrs. William F. Browne, who's having a street fete at her home Tuesday for St. Robert's House of Studies in Pomfret, Ct., issued an invitation to all to attend the affair. It sounds very interesting, with bridge throughout the afternoon, but the girls wrestle in the evening with an outstanding program of entertainment slated.

Cards held no interest for Mrs. James Shea, who sat on the porch watching tennis matches throughout the afternoon. Her white sport dress was trimmed with scroll embroidery of black. She's summering at North Scituate with daughter Frances, who's enjoying a respite from Radcliffe and scholastic duties.

NICKEL COUPON DAY AT PARK

Another glorious Nickel Day will be held at Norumbega Park, Auburndale, on Thursday, Aug. 6.

Sixteen money saving Nickel Day coupons will appear in all editions of Wednesday's Boston American which will entitle readers to enjoy another big holiday for a few nickels.

These coupons will bring special discounts on the merry-go-round, seaplanes, tumble bug, Venetian swings, Ferris wheel and all other attractions as well as supplying sandwiches, cool drinks and tonics at the park stands at cut rates.

The additional attraction, the outdoor circus of performing dogs and monkeys, starts at four in the afternoon and is free to everyone within the park gates.

Should rainy weather postpone the Nickel Day celebration on Thursday, the same coupons will be honored at Norumbega Park on Friday.

Be sure to watch for the coupon in Wednesday's, Aug. 5, Boston American.

Clambake Planned

While their husbands are discussing the weighty problems of statute, and common law at the annual meeting of the American Bar Association and the national conference of the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, which will be held in Boston for ten days beginning Aug. 22, the wives from all sections of the United States and England will be occupied with the elaborate program of entertainments which the Ladies Hospitality committee of the Boston Bar Association has planned.

Mrs. Lorimer Whittington, daughter of the late Sherman Whipple, famous Boston attorney, is chairman of the committee which is planning one of the most interesting events on its program, a country style clambake to be held at Plymouth on Sunday, Aug. 23.

Assisting Mrs. Whittington are Mrs. Farnell Adams, Mrs. Clarence A. Barnes, Mrs. Charles W. Bartlett, Mrs. Francis J. Carney, Mrs. William P. Rivers, Mrs. Whipple Fay, Mrs. Holder M. Holmes, Mrs. John Shyne and Mrs. Richard H. Worrall.

Woman Killed Walking Tracks

Athol, Aug. 3—For more than a half century Mrs. Hosia Stanhope, 80, of North Main street, had made daily journeys to walk along the railroad tracks, a route that was a short cut to church.

Today this practice cost the woman her life. Two coupled locomotives, that were not scheduled to pass at the time, ground the woman beneath their wheels.

Mrs. Stanhope, according to friends, never missed a day at church.

Bloomsburg, Pa., Aug. 3 (AP)—Samuel J. Reeves, president of the Hosiery Corporation of America, announced today a 10 per cent increase in hourly wages, and a week's vacation for all employes who have been with the company for five years prior to August 1.

The concern is operating full time, he said, employing 1200 men.

Club Members Start on Vacation Trips

For some Bostonians, vacation time means a trip abroad . . . for others New England beaches hold a lure.

M. Antonic Sclimos of Brookline, who's active in all things intellectual, is bound for a month's stay in Ireland. Undoubtedly she'll collect some interesting legends and folk lore for her lectures for the coming season. She takes an active part in the Boston Chapter of Trinity College alumnae affairs.

Olympic games will be the destination of Helen Ann Fitzgerald who sailed Saturday for her vacation on the continent. She serves as treasurer of the Boston Swimming Association and is interested in the Junior Philomathean.

At Hampton

Another Junior Philomathean who's enjoying these warm summer days is Edythe Cunningham of Marlboro, who is vacationing at Hampton Beach, N. H. Heyeling is her favorite summer sport and she also should be in fine trim to rejoin Junior Philomathea's hopping class when it resumes its tone of the Arnold Arboretum in the Fall.

She also takes part in alumnae affairs of Rosary Academy.

Touring Maine are Ruth Giblin and Ruth Kennedy of Brighton. They will stop at Bar Harbor to take part in the gay whirl at this swank resort.

"THE BOY CASTAWAYS" BY JULES VERNE

CHAPTER 25

"It would take too long," replied Gordon. "According to the map there'd be 30 or 40 miles to cover, which would take four or five days. They'd be anxious at French Dog and it's better not to worry them."

"Sooner or later we'll have to explore that part of the island!" retorted Doniphan.

"Yes," said Gordon, "and I intend to organize an expedition for that purpose."

"Yet," remarked Cross, "it would be better not to go back by the same way . . ."

"That's understood," answered Gordon. "We'll follow the lake up to Ston river, then go straight towards the cliff going along the base of it."

"But why go back on the same shore we've followed once?" asked Wilcox.

"That's right, Gordon," added Doniphan, "why not cut across this sandy plain to Traps-Woods, which can't be more than three or four miles southwest?"

Night Comes

"Because we'll always be forced to cross Stop River," replied Gordon. "We know we can cross where we crossed yesterday, while lower down we might find that the river had become a torrent. I think it's wiser not to go through the forest until we cross Stop River."

"Always careful, Gordon," cried Doniphan, not without a little sarcasm.

"We can't be too careful," answered Gordon.

They returned in the night's camp, where they ate hurriedly and, seized with fatigue, folded their blankets, picked up their guns and started back to French Dog. The weather was fine, and all Gordon feared was that it would be too fine for the next 36 hours, for unpleasant to cross French Dog during the next season.

In five hours they easily covered the nine miles to Stop river. Near the river Doniphan killed two beautiful hooded orioles, whose hash fantasies mixed with forest undergrowth and nests are the finest. This put Doniphan in good spirits, as had Dan Service, who was always ready to shoot, cook and eat a bear, or any part.

That is just what he did at noon after the boys crossed the stream in the largest boat.

"Now that we're in the woods," said Gordon, "I hope Baxter will have a chance to use his lesso or his bolas."

"They're not been much use up to now, have they?" asked Doniphan, who only respected his gun for hunting.

"What could he do against birds?" demanded Service.

"Birds or beasts, Service, I have no confidence!"

"Nor me either!" added Cross, always ready to support his cousin.

"Wait until Baxter has a chance to use them before you say anything," said Gordon. "I'm sure he'll do some fine work. If our powder gives out we'll never be minus lassos and bolas!"

"More likely we'd be minus the game," sneered Doniphan.

"Well, we'll see," replied Gordon, "and in the meantime let's have some lunch!"

Service roasted the cocks and it satisfied exceedingly appetite. These birds, each as large as 20 pounds.

The rest was eaten in the last hour and then in the cool of the day Pilaco left to more of it than had his companions.

The boys then entered that unexplored part of Traps-Woods which Stop River crossed on its way to the Pacific.

The map indicated that it turned northward, going around the esplanade of the cliff, and then the north was found the promontory of Bahe des Tempetes. Gordon decided to abandon the river bank once it would take them in a direction opposite to French Dog.

By waiting to arrive at the first approach of Auckland Hill by the shortest way, they would have to have in a southern direction.

Talking his proposition to companions Gordon got straight west. The trees grew less closely than in the southern part of Traps-Woods and left full room for the ground, less encumbered with brush, allowed a free circulation. There were many wild flowers, and Gordon, when botanical knowledge was not void of interest, made a useful discovery of a little bush black with red fruit the size of a nut.

"I think this is a berry plant which the Indians use in many ways," he said.

"If it's eatable," said Service, "let's have some." Before Gordon could stop him Service had crushed two or three of the berries in the fruit. What a face he made! And how his comrades laughed when he spit it, letter from out!

"You told me it was edible, Gordon," cried Service.

"I never said you could eat it," replied Gordon. "The Indians use this fruit to obtain a liquor by fermentation. It's something like brandy and we can use it in our pharmacy. Let's take a bag of these berries."

Baxter and Webb filled their knapsacks and the boys went down on their way.

A Paradise

A minor important discovery was made that afternoon a quarter of an hour before reaching the Auckland Hill. The aspect of the region had changed. The ray of trees had disappeared, and in their place were only bushes and patch. The trees were 30 feet high and the stone formation of the ground.

The most new Antarctic beech trees which keep their green foliage all winter. These trees were unrecognizable the heat of which had taken the place of commonest. These hardier representatives the "penseltis," a tea tree found even in high altitudes and of which the aromatic leaves give a good tea.

"Here is something which will replenish our store of tea," said Gordon. "Let's take a few of these leaves and maybe we'll come back to gather some for the winter."

Auckland Hill near its northern extremity was reached at 4 o'clock. Although it appeared not high from French Dog, it would have been impossible to get over its side, which was as straight as a wall. They followed the base towards Zealand River.

Two miles further they came to a forrest which, behind drew a narrow gorge of the cliff, and which it was easy to find a little down there.

"This must be the source of Lyke Creek," said Doniphan.

"Well, let's stop on its right bank," replied Gordon. "It's five o'clock, and as night as well spend the night near this creek, under the big trees."

Service prepared the second meal for dinner. It was a meal again but that was unavoidable in camping out.

Gordon and Baxter went into the woods, one to search for new plants, the other to see his lasso and his bolas. They had gone almost a hundred feet when Gordon pointed to a group of animals frolicking in the grass.

"Goats!" asked Baxter in a low voice.

"Or at least animals that look like goats," replied Gordon. "Let's try and catch some of them."

"Alive?"

"Sure, it's a good thing Doniphan's not along or he'd have shot one already and scared the others away."

"Let's go carefully. Don't let them see us."

They were about a dozen animals. One of them, probably a sentinel, seeing danger was sniffing the air and looking around anxiously.

Suddenly the bolas went whistling over Baxter's hand about 20 feet from the ground. Skilfully and vigorously thrown, they wrapped themselves around a goat, while the others quickly disappeared.

A Lucky Catch

Gordon and Baxter ran to the goat which vainly tried to free herself. She was seized and tied, and with her mate taken two more were less nimble and kept near their mother.

"Hurrah!" cried Baxter in the joy of success. "Hurrah! are they not, Gordon?"

"No," said Gordon. "I think they're llamas."

"Do they give milk?"

"Certainly."

"Well, all right for llamas, then!"

Gordon was right. Llamas are domestic animals. Their legs are longer and their wool coarser and not fine as silk. Their head is small and their ears horns. They generally live in the pampas of South America and territories near the Magellan Straits.

Instead the reception given to Gordon and Baxter when they returned to camp, one pulling the llama by the rope of the bolas, the other carrying a kid under each arm. Since the mother was still feeding them, it was right that the boys would be able to raise them without great trouble. They might be the nucleus of a flock which would be useful in the colony.

Doniphan regretted losing a shot, but the bolas were more useful than guns in taking game alive.

The night was not as peaceful as the one on Safety Island. About three o'clock in the morning a great noise was heard, and Gordon, Service and Webb suddenly quite alone in the camp.

Doniphan, who was on watch, was far free his gun ready at hand, and not had the comrades. Had they been hostile Indians, they could have done working up them.

"What is it?" asked Wilcox.

"It sounds like wild animals," said Doniphan.

"They're probably jaguars or cougars," said Gordon. "One's as bad as the other!"

"Not quite," said Doniphan, "the cougar is less dangerous than the jaguar, but in packs they're bad."

The others got out their weapons.

"Don't shoot until you're certain of a real hit!" warned Gordon. "Besides, I think the fire will keep them away."

"They're not far off!" cried Cross.

This was true. The path must have been close to the camp, for the noise of the animals heard back with difficulty by Gordon. But nothing could be seen.

Doniphan then made a visit each night to drink near the boys' camp. Having found the place occupied, they showed their disapproval by these frightful roars.

Suddenly, at less than 20 feet, two points, sharp and moving, appeared on the dark. Immediately a shot was heard.

Doniphan had fired, and now more stronger than ever sounded out. The boys again prepared to fire if the animals neared the camp.

Baxter threw a piece of burning wood towards the place where the fire was but found only burning coals.

An instant later the wild animals were into the depth of Traps-Woods.

"They've gone!" cried Cross.

"Good riddance!" said Service.

"Can't they come back?" asked Cross.

Blaze of Red Fox

VERITABLY, the huge Paquin collar of red fox shimmered and blazed like a fire in the night when Miss Evelyn Hassman modeled this beautiful new autumn coat in a sunny spot on the Ritz roof. And it was a foregone conclusion that it should be awarded the black-and-silver tag.

Nubbed wool, a rich forest brown, is swathed around the figure, in the modified princess line which is to be a favorite choice of the fashion-wise girl this season. But, naturally, the magnificent collar is as much the focal point as a spotlight on a stage. Eyes will turn wherever it goes. There is a slight shoulder fullness, and an interesting detail is an extra, round collar-effect of fabric following the outline of the fur in back, in a sort of yoke-collar.

The coat is one of the happy finds of August, priced not far above fifty dollars as a mid-summer temptation, and scheduled to shoot upward in price shortly.

Thoughtless Leads

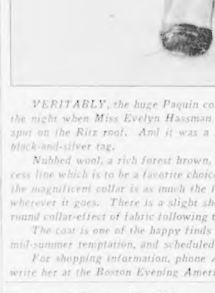
It is a good idea, as a general rule, to lead a suit partner has bid. This is especially true of the opening lead, since the leader often has little other information to go by.

But he should not permit that to serve as an excuse for thoughtless play as West did in today's hand.

East, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

North's bidding was a little optimistic. Since his partner could make no stronger bid than a simple overcall he should have contented himself with a simple raise to two spades.

West opened the King of diamonds and held the trick. Without bothering to analyze the hand he next led a card of the other suit his partner had bid—hearts.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣
2 ♡	3 ♠	3 ♡	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Dummy's Ace won and a diamond was returned. East won, saw the danger and returned a trump, but it was too late.

South won and ruffed two diamonds in dummy and two hearts in his own hand. Two more rounds of trumps compelled East to discard. For fear of establishing South's diamond ten, East had to hang on to the diamond Ace. With great reluctance, therefore, he released his King of hearts.

South promptly led the ten of diamonds and East had to win with his Ace. The forced club lead then gave declarer his game.

West should have realized that South had a spade-diamond two-suiter. The dummy in conjunction with the bidding fairly shrieked for a trump lead. As a matter of fact, even a club lead would have defeated the contract since it would have killed the throw-in.

MARY LEARNS WHAT SHE MUST TAKE ALONG ON TRIP

CHAPTER 64

AS KATHERINE asked Mary what she could "throw into the jackpot" for the money to be telegraphed to Mrs. Gibbs in New Hampshire, so that there would be no delay caused by the cashing of a check, I fancied I saw Mary flush, and wondered if the child had anything save a small sum of money in her possession.

"I am sure Licky and my father have money enough to make up the balance," I said hastily.

"What's the matter with mine?" Mary asked pertly. "I can assure you it isn't tainted, nor does it bear a single serial number that's posted by the authorities. Noel just go to from the bank this morning so that his ever-loving spouse wouldn't be broke among her relations. He's proud that way, Noel is. And if fifteen will do you any good, why I'll step and fetch it at once."

MARY GETS MONEY

"All right, step lively, dear," I told her, on my way to the door. "I'll be back with the check in a minute, Katherine."

"I'll beat you, hands down," Mary said, skimming past me lightly. And I had not reached my desk when she flashed past my door on her return to the nursery.

With a smile at her impetuosity, I wrote the check for Katherine, blotted it, took ten dollars from my purse and returned with both to the nursery. Katherine took them with a mechanical "thank you," and stuffed them into her purse.

"We'll have room for everything else except the crib in the two cars," she said. "If you can be wrapping the play pen, with its mattress, the folding go-cart and enough blankets and linen for the crib to do until you can have the rest expressed.

"Our own linens will be furnished, but I would gain a few extra dish towels, hand towels and bath towels. I'll send to the linens for the baby as soon as I get back. If you'll see that the tiny portable refrigerator, the small electric grill, and an electric toaster are in readiness for packing, I'll be infinitely obliged.

SCHEDULE GOES ON

"Don't pack them until I get back. One of you will probably carry the refrigerator in her lap, while the other takes the portable stove and the cooking pans. Our baby's schedule isn't going to be interrupted, either by land or by sea."

Her smile was mischievous, her tone light as Katherine went out and closed the nursery door after her. Then Mary confronted me.

"What can I do for you?" she asked.

"Get your packing out of the way first," I said.

I considered a bit.

"What shall I take?" she countered, a puzzled look in her eyes.

"We'll be gone about six days —perhaps five—two on the journey up, because we have the baby and we shall have to break the trip, two or three days up there to get them settled, and one day for the return journey. With both of us driving we ought to be able to make it in a day."

"Oh! yes, yes, of course," Mary's smile was enigmatic, but I ignored what she was thinking of my own propensity to overtax my strength and of the inadvisability of my crowding on long a journey into one day. Evidently I was to be taken care of as well as the children, I said to myself, and I did not know whether to be piqued or gratified.

MARY GETS LIST

I had no time for either emotion, for Mary was waiting for my answer to her question.

"I'll list them in the order of their importance," I said. "First your cosmetics—"

"Mauw, mauw!" Mary said vigorously, but I ignored her lofty.

"Enough changes of lingerie, hosiery, handkerchiefs and pajamas for this week," I went on. "A plain, comfortable dress for the start, so you can keep your traveling suit for the return journey, a pair of comfortable walking shoes—"

Mary's face clouded like that of a disappointed child.

"Oh! Aren't we going to have a chance to go fishing?" she queried.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

COPYRIGHT, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WHEN THE SCALES go from 125 to 128, from 128 to 132 and on up to 140, why not do something about it before you reach the 150 mark?

Here's what five years of comfortable living and too many calories can do to you: The first year, you may gain three or four pounds, scarcely worth noticing. You can gain this amount by taking as small an excess as 50 extra calories a day.

The second year, you get a bit careless and add eight pounds, but in a year you get used to this increased weight and do nothing about it. Finally you can build up to seventeen pounds in a year, which, after all averages only 200 excess calories a day.

One extra pat of butter or one cupful more, in addition to your daily energy expenditure can add forty pounds of weight in five years. Figure it out for yourself . . . it takes only 4,000 extra calories to make one pound of adipose tissue.

A ten-pound gain in twenty years presents no weight problem, for statistics show it's gain to be average. But a ten-pound gain in one year, or even in two years, should concern you to the point of action. It is obvious that something has gone wrong with your weight mechanism, and it's probably all your fault!

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Boss Forces Unwelcome Attentions on Girl Stenographer

By Beatrice Fairfax

During the past few weeks we have heard from various sides in the controversy which arose from Professor Harold J. Smith's definition of the perfect secretary." Not the least interesting and important of the many letters I have received is printed in today's column.

It is from a young girl who, morally obligated to support her widowed mother and two younger children, was continually harassed by the proposals and love avowals of her elderly employer, whom she loathed and despised.

The letter of this girl is well worth reading, for she presented her individual solution to the problem which besets not a few girls today.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My situation was different from the usual case of married employer and girl secretary. Although my employer fell in love with me, I learned and defended him.

At the same time, I had to flatter him to keep my position because all this happened during the worst year of the depression, at a time when no one else in my family was earning a penny. I still look back on that experience with horror.

If I could have obtained a scrubbing job which would have taken care of mother and the two younger children, I would cheerfully resigned by $25-a-week salary to take it.

It became a long, fierce battle between the boss and me, in which for the sake of keeping a roof over our heads I had to put my wits against a man who was thoroughly experienced.

Of course, I had to hide my feelings, and may I be forgiven here and hereafter for all the pain and fancy lying I did to keep that job, to want at the same time the unwholesome attention of that horrible old man.

When he suggested little trips, and he suggested, I was beginning to lose an interest in him, but it would be impossible for me to make a complete break. I cared a good deal then. And, of course, that time never came.

I used to stage what he fondly thought were lovers' quarrels. I would take offense at some imaginary thing he did, and I'd pout and rub along for about a week, or home and have a little peace.

The time old fellow would start up again, saying that if I didn't care about him he must part, handing me more money for me and feeling about the way he did was among him crazy. It is to my credit that I was again and go on with my fiction that perhaps, after all, I was beginning to care.

I can't tell you how thoroughly I despised myself for all this deceit. But what would I do? My father was dead; we had lost our home. I would come home night after night to find my mother weeping over our troubles, although she knew absolutely nothing of mine.

The time came when I couldn't stand the cheating a moment longer. I was willing to try anything to get out of the trap, to get back my own self-respect, to stop being the great friend I was. I felt that I would know happiness if I could only box that man's ears before I left.

About this time a new industry opened up in our town. Seeing that the boarding houses were overcrowded, I went to the bank and persuaded the president to rent us our old home so that we could take boarders. He didn't seem very enthusiastic over the scheme, but finally agreed. The house was big and rambling and we ran much rundown after having been closed for two years.

Mother was in that place where she felt no one in the world had any troubles but herself, so I must give a good deal of credit for presented her with a paint brush and paint pot and told her to get busy and help to get the house livable.

There was a heavenly afternoon in which I told the boss what I thought of him. He called me "a little cheat," and I guess I was at that.

The boarding house was a modest success. Mother manages it now, and I have another job.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 28 years old, and for family is very comfortable. I have an expensive car and good clothes and nice home, but am not popular with those set—I don't know why.

Many my troubles I have myself to put trouble but in long months. It has to be popular with men who wants for I have had no time for heartthrobs, except eating two of the set. I would much rather go out with a poor girl and have a good time than be seen about "town" by a party in a swell home. D. R.

MY DEAR SON:

Perhaps your laziness these young men with whom you'd like to be friendly be soft and effeminate, and you realize that you're unfavorable with boys who make themselves to being "regular guys." Don't you ever going to be selective in a big way—astonishingly lowing, boxing?

As you can afford it, join a good man's club which specializes in sports, and show them there's nothing in the sissy about you. You might be psycho-analyzed, or talk to your doctor about this.

Art of Make-Up

POSED BY OLIVIA DE HAVILAND

Subtle Use of Cosmetics Is Desirable for All Women

By DONNA GRACE

OCCASIONALLY we hear of some beauty who claims to be what is usually termed a "natural beauty"—a beauty without the least aid of artifice or make-up.

We seem to recall stories we may have read of the village maiden, of starched cotton gowns and stout shoes and hosiery; in other words, we place her back a generation or two where she seems to belong!

There are very few girls who cannot be made more attractive by some little correct touch in the art of facial improvement. Most of us can employ all the beauty aids and look better for it. Yet some of our "natural beauties" will even boast proudly that they never took a bit of cosmetics and have never even had their hair trimmed. They seem to look upon it as a virtue and express a kind of superior tolerance for the worldly sisters who indulge in any of the little feminine practices of improving themselves.

BORESOME BEAUTY

I met such a young lady at a week-end party not long ago and found her to be positively boring in her sense self-satisfied air. Her hair was blond, of drab, lifeless shade, and she wore it in straight, goddess-straight style at the back and sides of her head. It was far too thick to follow the head contour, so it bulged out in a heavy effect all over the head.

Of course, you would know her eyebrows were wide and without any shaping and absolutely no make-up. The eyes were blue and dull, if they had any fringed lashes or care. No need to describe her any further, but you can imagine what a nice, clever hair thinning and shaping would do, along with a few shampoos that would impart some light to her hair. That and nice trim, well-shaped eyebrows would make her look a bit like belonged in this age.

Her whole cosmetic kit consisted of a box of talcum bath powder and a comb. She was quite consistent in her peculiar simplicity, too. I could not help but observe her plain, unattractive negligee compared with the dainty colorful robe of the other girls in the room. Should some passing their "dangerous new powder" or the "marvelous rouge for lipstick, the "adorable perfume," etc.

PLENTY OF AID

With all the exquisite boxes of beauty aids and attractive ways and devices offered us every day, I can't understand how any girl can resist them and fit in the modern world at all.

The budding miss who feels she can be so independent of those arts is, I am afraid, doomed to blossom into a perennial wall-flower. You must decide what type you are, then employ every means at hand to develop and perfect yourself in your own style. You are sure to have some good points that you can dramatize.

I will be glad to send you my Make-up Chart or the Eyelash Treatment if you will enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for each and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Health

Diet Cause Of Acne

ANY PERSISTENT eruption of the skin leads to a great deal of personal annoyance and embarrassment.

One of the most common of these is called by the doctors "acne vulgaris". The disease is particularly distressing because it responds so slowly to all forms of treatment.

A recent report points out that some of the disturbance in the endocrine system the "ductless glands." Many theories have been advanced regarding the cause of this ailment and there is little proof to support any of them. Constipation, improper diet, lack of exercise, lack of cleanliness and the neglect of other hygienic factors are believed by some to cause acne. Yet many persons are afflicted with acne who do not suffer from constipation or present other of these factors.

GLANDULAR DISORDER?

The recent report to which I have referred points out that acne is frequently encountered in young persons just reaching the age of puberty. It may well be that certain glandular functions, more pronounced at this period, may have something to do with it. Further research will determine the truth.

In the disturbance the skin has a greasy and unhealthy appearance, the face, neck, and back are covered with unsightly pimples often these become infected and filled with pus.

If no other cause can be found in a given case it may be well to have special tests carried out to determine whether or not there is a disturbance in the endocrine system.

For many years diet has been believed to be an important factor in the cure and prevention of acne. No one will deny that the excessive use of starches, sugar, fried foods, salt, peppers, spices and pickles is a hindrance to the welfare of the acne sufferer. An abundance of fresh fruits and vegetables should be included in the daily diet.

Let me warn you against the misuse of soaps, ointments and other home remedies recommended for the treatment of acne. These preparations are often of little value, particularly in those cases where the skin is unusually sensitive. They may actually increase the irritation. If a salve or ointment is needed your doctor will prescribe it.

Martha Lee

Milk, Egg And Wheat Recipes

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WMEX.

FOOD ALLERGY has been defined by one humorist as "food alibi," a way of avoiding foods objectionable to us.

But it goes deeper into the skin than that. And those suffering from these disturbances, which generally have their foundation in food, find them very unpleasant. Hives, rashes of all kinds, asthma, hay fever are all allergic caused by one thing or another that the individual is usually sensitive too.

Frequently we are asked for recipes that are milk and egg free and wheat free. They are generally for breads, cookies and cakes—foods we hate to give up entirely.

OATMEAL BUCKWHEAT COOKIES
(Milk-Egg-Wheat Free)
2-3 cup oatmeal
½ cup buckwheat flour
5 teaspoons sugar
3 teaspoons cream of tartar
1½ teaspoons soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon olive oil
1-3 cup water.

Mix dry ingredients. Add water and olive oil and beat thoroughly. Drop in tins greased with olive oil and floured with buckwheat flour. Bake at 400 deg. F. for 10 minutes.

POTATO FLOUR SPONGE CAKE
(Milk-Wheat Free)
4 egg yolks
¾ cup sugar
4 egg whites
½ cup potato flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored; add sugar gradually and continue beating; add vanilla. Mixwith sifted flour, baking powder and salt. Add to yolks. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into egg mixture. Bake in a moderate oven for 50 minutes. Use a greased cake pan.

GINGERBREAD
(Milk-Free)
½ cup vegetable shortening
½ cup brown sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup molasses
2½ cups whole wheat or barley flour
1¼ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup boiling water

Cream shortening and sugar together. Add well beaten eggs and molasses and blend thoroughly. Sift flour with soda and salt. Stir spices in boiling water and flour in molasses mixture alternately with the water in which spices have been soaked. Pour into a greased pan about 9 inches square and bake at 350 deg. F. for 30 to 40 minutes. Serve with fruit juice.

Boy Barn-Breakers In Clean-up Penalty

Dover, N. H., Aug. 3 (AP)—Ovid Taylor's barn was quick and span today—thanks to City Marshal Andrew H. McDaniel.

Taylor reported to McDaniel his barn had been broken into and that the place looked as though a cyclone had struck it. McDaniel rounded up the four boys responsible.

Instead of calling them into court McDaniel struck upon the novel idea of having them repair the damage. Under Taylor's direction they did an excellent job.

NOW MEET SUZY

Prizes for Wisecracks

Oh what a "line" had "Suzy." And, oh what a "line" the boys had for her!

Wish'ye they saying about "Suzy"?

YOU! suggest a fitting line or wisecrack for each of the characters in each of five photos printed every day in the Boston American beginning today—and pin yourself in line for one of the 55 prizes offered in this novel dialogue contest conducted by the Boston Evening American and Loew's State and Orpheum theatres.

HERE'S AN EXAMPLE

For example, take the accompanying photo of Miss Harlow, Tone and Grant.

Gary Grant—"If you knew Suzy, like I know Suzy—"

Franchot Tone—"Well, what would you do about it?"

Joan Harlow—"Don't fight boys, because I'm Suzy and I'm mighty choosy."

Catch on? Now get busy! And write one of your snappiest lines. The prize money should be useful on your vacation.

"Suzy" is the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production starring Joan Harlow and Franchot Tone and Cary Grant and opens Friday at both Loew's State and Orpheum theatres. The film tells the story of a chorus girl stranded in London at the outbreak of the World War and led into a second marriage under the mistaken belief that her first aviator husband is dead. Franchot Tone and Cary Grant are the respective Number One and Two husbands, offer sterling support to Miss Harlow.

LIST OF PRIZES

The list of prizes is as follows: First prize $10.00 in cash; second prize $5.00 in cash; third prize $2.00 in cash; and the following seven winners $1.00 each. The next twenty-five numbers will each receive a pair of most theater tickets to Loew's state or Orpheum theaters.

The contest closes on Saturday midnight. All employees of the Boston American and Loew's Boston theaters are not eligible.

"Perfect Tribute" Author Is Dead

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Mary E. Shipman Andrews, whose story "The Perfect Tribute" has become a classic narrative about Abraham Lincoln, is dead.

The noted author succumbed late last night at a hospital where she underwent an operation nearly a week ago.

"The Perfect Tribute" tells of Lincoln's return from Gettysburg, where he delivered his renowned address. On the train, he hears a funeral. The story goes, he starts for a walk alone.

He finds a young boy who says his brother, a Confederate soldier, is dying in a Washington prison hospital. He needs a lawyer to make his will.

Lincoln, without identifying himself, goes to the hospital. Mrs. Andrews writes. The prisoner, unable to use his rather, tells excitedly about the wonderful address the President had made.

Lincoln finally realizes that he did not fail after all.

Main Street Broadcast Tonight

By N. F. T.

Another of those ace air attractions under the "Radio Theater" billing, is booked for tonight (WNAC) when "Main Street" holds forth between 9 and 10 o'clock, with the "mike" spotlight focused upon Barbara Stanwyck and Fred MacMurray.

It's the famous story of small-town life, penned by Sinclair Lewis. Twice filmed, following production of a striking Broadway play, the theme of "Main Street" is believed by Cecil B. De Mille, directing the "Radio Theater" series, to be specially suited to modern broadcasting. Well known Hollywood screen personalities will appear in the two popular stars.

Mary Easel Speaks, soprano, plans to sing selections from two of Sigmund Romberg's best known operettas to open her regular musical-concert concert with William Daly's symphonic string orchestra, and the mixed chorus (WEEI) this evening from 8:30 to 9 o'clock. Compositions are "Song of Love," from "Blossom Time," and "Auf Wedersehn," from "Blue Paradise."

Miss Speaks also will sing Eric Coates' famous Love Made For You and Me," "Schakowsky's "Without the Lonely Heart," and, accompanied by the chorus, Okey Speaks' "Morning."

Orchestral and choral selections will include the themes from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night Dream," and the selects from Schmitt's "Lyric."

"N. F. T."

The Chicago Philharmonic Orchestra, under the baton of Richard Czerwonky, will be heard over Station WNAC and associated stations of the Yankee network tonight between 8:30 and 10:00 p. m. from Chicago, when the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven's "Choral" will be heard. Lotta Hertling, soprano, is the soloist.

THERE REALLY A CROWD

When you hear the word "duo" you immediately think of two instruments. When you hear "quartet" you imagine four instruments. But don't be puzzled when someone says "trio." When the "Musical Tricks and Treats" program is heard next week with Jules Lande, Ralph Colombo and Hoss Gorman, the word trio should be spelled by nine and add one for good measure. Altogether the three musicians play 28 instruments during their program.

July Active, But Leaders Are Cautious

Little Summer Let-Down Manifest Thus Far; Cheery Figures

By B. C. FORBES

July has given a good account of itself.

The traditional summer quiet has not become distinctly manifest.

Security prices repeatedly moved to new peaks and ended the month with an average gain of fully five per cent.

Commodities also advanced and finished the month with a spectacular advance in grains.

Industrial production is increasing, and the prospect is that many other cheerful assurances will be instigated by the very fine new law pertaining to strengthening of corporation surpluses.

Retail trade only slightly stimulated latterly by bonus spending continues substantially ahead of last year.

Railroads are doing better everywhere and are placing more orders for rehabilitation and betterment. The prospect is that railway purchases will expand notably.

Most utility companies are proving able to retain in the form of net earnings a large part of their increased gross.

The oil industry, after a painfully long period of irregularity and uncertainty, has become more stabilized, and this is registering in the tills of most companies.

The copper industry, long harassed, has greatly improved its condition. Whether larger prices prevail will depend upon how much restraint to be used.

Banks, despite some slight improvement in earnings, have not been doing decidedly better the past few months.

Steel manufacturers are operating at more than 50 per cent above twelve months ago. But the United States Corporation and Bethlehem Steel issued very encouraging statements last week and applied the money toward new facilities, despite threatened labor troubles.

Construction has increased of late years, but still falls short of expectations.

Unemployment is coming very slowly, being reduced somewhat, pending the trading into new and authentic channels, whereby their payrolls more workers than at the height of the boom.

With our many countries second quarter corporation reports now coming in, the volume of new record notable gains.

The National City Bank of New York points out that "Separate figures by quarters are available for 200 of the industrial companies that have so far made this report and show combined net profits less deficits of approximately $311,000,000 in the first quarter and $1,000,000 in the second quarter of last year. The percentage gain over last year was 75.6 per month when the gain of

It was HIGH time, that is when the tax rate was high.

It was HIGH even if that was not a war time.

It was HIGH although born and unborn Lost Lots was to be mortgaged by the billion-dollar boys at Washington.

'Roaring Girl' Next For Carole Lombard

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Aug. 3—The vivacious and popular Carole Lombard has had no battle with Paramount in spite of printed rumors. Carole hasn't so much as stuck her nose in the studio for six weeks and her present contract doesn't expire until December, so Carole feels there is plenty of time to talk big business. And from the effort Adolph Zukor is making to please her, there may be no necessity to even suggest a raise is in order.

You see Carole reports at Paramount today for "Roaring Girl" which Al Hall is assigned to direct and every effort is being put forward to persuade Fredric March to star with her. Fredric, who has postponed down a big England offer and who has no other picture in sight, will probably accept.

• • •

That charming child actress, Louella O. Parsons, Jr., little Miss Louella, is occupying the attention of the powers that be at Warner Brothers. He will go far, for he must have good stories. So Pound and Bob Booth Twyngellow's delightful comedy with its romance with Lolly in the lead following "The Prince and the Pauper," Billy's sensitive portrayal as the lonely child Anthony Overton in "Anthony Adverse" has captivated all who saw him.

• • •

As I said I like to Robert Young. He climbs to stardom today in rugged, dramatic attention to the poetry and considers the fact that Bob has three hits to his credit, one with Joan Crawford, second in "The Bride Wins Out" "It's Love Again" and "Secret Agent." As a matter of fact, Bob's new steps into the Clark Gable-Joan Crawford film, "Love on the Run."

• • •

Al Rosen must as well get accustomed to being lonesome for Marion. Marion, our sweet little affection, will be busy on a picture for some as Irene Dunne begins work at Columbia in "Theodora Goes Wild." Director Richard Boleslawski has selected the fair maid Marion for an important part.

• • •

Incidentally, rumors talking about Irene for "The Count of Luxembourg" are announced as a Gladys Swarthout vehicle. Whichever girl gets the role, she'll have Frank Forest as hero to the Franz Lehar musical.

• • •

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: The rumor of the battle between Elaine Barrie and John Barrymore notwithstanding, Miss Barrie still wears the huge diamond ring given her by John in the days when she was his Ariel and he her Caliban. He has been so ill in a sanitarium that his one visit was allowed in the policeman. However, when he recovers he will go on a personal appearance tour with the young woman who is very fancy indeed in her devotion to Barrymore.

• • •

So you Broadway fan of the country meeting has taken before the wings of Fanny Zanuck and will leave Paramount on temporary loan to play the role of head man in Goldy's London's fascinating drama of the world-famed musical-wise house to be directed by Victor Saville. King, as though the young one interested in the film will be provided Margaret Young. And Jean Arnaldo, the Florence team of Florence.

Melvyn Douglas appears to be laying down the law to Mary Astor in this scene from "And So They Were Married" which comes to the Keith Boston screen on Thursday.

Cosmopolitan Films Near Release

Cosmopolitan Productions announce today the impending release of their first three feature pictures of the season of 1936-37.

According to the company's production plans six films are to be made and released through Warner Brothers during the new season.

First on the schedule is "Give Me Your Heart," which stars Kay Francis in a role described by those who have had previews of the film as the most dramatic of her career, eclipsing in human appeal even her portrayal of Florence Nightingale in "The White Angel."

Kay Francis

"Give Me Your Heart" will be released in September. The screen production has been adapted by Casey Robinson from Jay Mallory's famous stage play "Sweet Aloes," which ran for a year in London. George Brent has the leading masculine role opposite Miss Francis while Richard Young has a part of almost equal importance. Other principals are the young English actor Patric Knowles, Frieda Inescort, Henry Stephenson, Zeffie Tilbury and Hallwell Hobbes. The picture was directed by Arenio Mayo.

• • •

Next on the Cosmopolitan list is the long-awaited "Green Light," starring Errol Flynn, dashing young Irish actor of "Captain Blood" fame.

"Green Light" is being directed by Frank Borzage from a screen play by Milton Krims, based on the best-selling novel by Lloyd C. Douglas, which ran in Cosmopolitan Magazine. The new picture is expected to win even greater popularity for Errol Flynn than came to him through "Captain Blood," also a Cosmopolitan production.

Appearing in the two leading feminine roles opposite Flynn are Anita Louise and Margot Lindsay. Another outstanding part has been assigned to the young English actor, Henry Ordell Hardwicke. The picture will be released early in October.

• • •

Later in that month will come the big musical picture spectacular, Marion Davis and Clark Gable's "Cain and Mabel," a story of the Broadway theater and the pioneering of the Ed Wynns, as promised as the most lavish of all musical screen achievements.

"Cain and Mabel" is now being completed at the Warner Brothers-Cosmopolitan studios at Burbank, Calif., under the joint direction of Lloyd Bacon and Joseph Santley. Supporting Miss Davies and Clark Gable is an unusually notable cast, including Phoebe Kanna, David Carlyle, Walter Catlett, Robert Chenoweth, Johnny White, Fred Kelsey and William Collier, Sr. The musical score has been provided by the famous song-writing team, Harry Warren and Al Dubin.

The story of "Cain and Mabel" is concerned with the romance of a Broadway musical comedy actress played by Miss Davies and a heavyweight prizefighter acted by Clark Gable. Miss Davies' role brings out her musical talent as a comedienne and also affords generous scope for her beauty and charm as a glamorous heroine.

The subjects of the remaining three Cosmopolitan pictures for the 1936-37 season and the names of the players who will be starred or featured in them will be announced in the near future.

We Stand Firm

VOLTAIRE SAID the earth was the lunatic asylum of the universe.

If he were living today he would probably say Europe and Asia are the lunatic asylums of the earth.

And he would also probably salute the United States and England as the ONLY TWO SANE CONSTITUTIONAL COUNTRIES LEFT AMONG THE MAJOR NATIONS.

Russia, Germany, Italy, France, Spain, China and Japan present a composite picture of civil war, tyrannous rule, predatory militarism and a barbarous disregard of those simple human rights that it has taken thousands of years of struggle to attain.

The world slides into an inferno—while the United States of America, because of our CONSTITUTIONAL GUARANTEES and THE PALLADIUM OF THE SUPREME COURT, stands firmly mortised in her own democratic faith and traditions.

We stand firm, and have not rocked, in spite of a depression and in spite of three years of dangerous political flirtations in high places with THE RADICAL, ALIEN-MINDED DOCTRINES THAT ARE AT THE BOTTOM OF ALL OF EUROPE'S TROUBLES.

WHAT has preserved us, what WILL PRESERVE US, from the chaos that is gradually girdling the earth?

Very simply—AMERICANISM!

That AMERICANISM rooted in the character of the founding fathers—

INDEPENDENCE, WILL, SELF-RELIANCE, THE ABILITY TO "TAKE IT," AND THE ANCIENT ANGLO-SAXON BELIEF THAT IT IS BETTER TO SUFFER TEMPORARILY THAN TO EXCHANGE LIBERTY FOR A REGIMENTED SECURITY.

Look at the world today from Gibraltar east to Mongolia—and thank God you are an AMERICAN, and, further, that you are an American prepared to defend your AMERICANISM against foreign lunacies or HOME-MADE IMITATIONS OF THEM.

The UNAUTHORIZED Debt

THIS Administration will pass into history as the greatest PER CAPITA debt-builder since the founding of the government.

PER CAPITA debts mean what YOU, YOUR WIFE AND YOUR BABY owe for public expenditures which YOU NEVER AUTHORIZED.

According to Washington dispatches, here are the COLD FACTS:

EVERY LIVING BEING in America is carrying a debt burden of $300.

In 1914 the per capita debt was only $12.

Expenditures in nearly four years of the New Deal Administration "exceed by at least 27 per cent the direct cost of the United States in carrying on the World War."

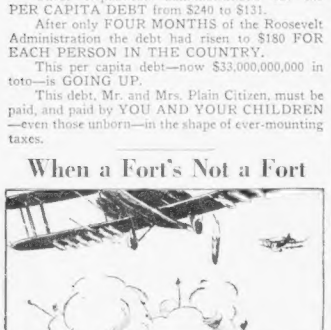
Three Republican administrations cut the PER CAPITA DEBT from $240 to $131.

After only FOUR MONTHS of the Roosevelt Administration the debt had risen to $180 FOR EACH PERSON IN THE COUNTRY.

This per capita debt—now $33,000,000,000 in toto—is GOING UP.

This debt, Mr. and Mrs. Plain Citizen, must be paid, and paid by YOU AND YOUR CHILDREN—even those unborn—in the shape of ever-mounting taxes.

When a Fort's Not a Fort



Six Army airplanes drop thirty sand "bombs" on old, abandoned Fort Tyler.

The bombs were dropped from a height of 10,000 feet—that's nearly two miles—and every one of them hit within 100 yards of the target.

Several were direct hits, smack on the bullseye.

It was only practice, of course.

But it showed beyond any shadow of a doubt what would have happened to Fort Tyler if those bombs had been loaded with high explosive instead of sand.

Fort Tyler would have been a hole in the ground.

The fort was built during the Spanish-American War at a cost of $500,000.

As a means of defense it literally isn't worth a dime now.

Had there been any doubt about that, the result of the bombing ended it.

Looking Into the Future

By Nelson Harding

Into the huge mouth of a cannon
Loaded with a great projectile,
Nervous Europe gazes wildly,
Stares into the jaws of chaos.

They, themselves, have forged and mounted
That same terror that confronts them,
And a glance into its muzzle
Is a look into the future.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Aug. 3.—Dizzy Astair, the stock's crew and my lady and I whipped a sudden notion to waltz a turnup from a central Park knoll. And stopped off with Dean Cornwell, then breakfasting at a Plaza window on cereal pie, apple and bacon Melba.

Afterward shoot on the avenue hailing Mr. De Rest and his sights [illegible] reorganized Pierpont Morgan's annex from his autographs. And home to find flamboyant posters Amon Carter sent of his Cinque Fort Week. Then to the Chatham to see Elsie Robinson and her grandson.

Ogden Nash, who might, judging from persons appearance, be my handy appothecary, has a small lower just drafted as first baseman for the Oneida team, is regarded as the most successful of modern poets financially.

He began as a copy writer in an advertising agency and is the creator of jerky rhymes that often don't. Yet people who read without taste for poetry like to read him.

He is popularly supposed to represent sophistication, and his rock-eyed jingles are the sort that are fun when read out loud at parties that have grown dull.

Some say he is a vogue, but that the same his following has increased steadily and shows no signs of diminishing.

Jack Dempsey proved to a fine feathered crowd that the home town paper would fervently be the social chief recently that he was as hoot on the banquet feet. He was dinnered by a group of antique Gold Coast big-wigs for his commendable part in a hospital charity drive.

Many famed in forensics preceded him and there was a collective gurgle switch when the master who once rode the teds stood. Dempsey has lost all the dynamic that made him take a scatter of mumbling monosyllables.

Personal nomination for a statesman making one of the outstanding impressions on the country during 1936—Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan.

Harlow is loitering a movement for some memorial to the late comedian, Bert Williams. Somehow the talented, self-effacing fellow who made the world laugh so hilariously has not received much recognition among his people.

Many ideas are incubating. To name one of the residential streets Bert Williams avenue, to erect a striking fountain near the famous "Wishing Tree," the stamping ground of Bill Robinson, etc. Yet not a peep Williams community house.

These and other suggestions have been made and any one is deserved. Few men of his time did so much for his race, and without display.

Historical note: Lois Long was first to start the recent handicame foolishness, in a sudden inspired pinch launching gaily with Sheila Barrett as "No. 21."

Fugitive: Billy Leeds was host to the biggest prize fight party of the season . . . Lady Mendelsohn-Bartholdy, English jewel and friend of the King, thought Coney Island and the hot dogs simply too-too . . . Amos 'n' Andy are now the biggest vaudeville box office attraction in America . . . Julia Sanderson is the last of the Turkish cigarette puffers . . . H. G. Wells thinks Joe Cook is our funniest comedian . . . Max Schmeling's wife takes a heavy sleeping potion at the hour of her husband's fights, wherever he is . . .

Nothing more expertly inspires my complete awe than those classy Vanderbilt receptionists who receive hoi polloi, especially at the outer gates of the editorial sanctums. They suggest Back Bay, Mayfair and the Gold Coast in capsule. Today, one trilled: "You wish to see whom?"

I not only forgot who it was but had to go out to the bulletin board to see in what office I was.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

We were poor people, we Robinsons. Dad worked for scanty wages. Mother scrimped and saved. Our dresses were let down, turned, dyed, patched . . . our shoes resoled until the last scrap of leather frayed.

Always the shadow of poverty lay over my father's life, and the darker shadow of disease. His days as well as his dollars were numbered. Six of us leaning on him—and so little strength or time to meet that burden. Yet, even when the breath was failing in his brave throat, he cried out to us once again the battling creed by which he had shaped his life.

"GO INTO DEBT"

"Go into debt!"—a strange creed for a poor man! A particularly strange creed for an honest, proud, man, who dreaded any default and despised dependency.

"Go into debt!" he said. "Not irresponsible debt. Nor debt for trivial things—mere luxuries or pleasures which, in the end, add nothing to life. But go into debt to buy a greater life.

"The man who makes something of his life always goes into debt, buys something he can't afford, then forces himself to meet the payments.

"Don't live within your means. Don't live within a safe, comfortable budget of your time, energy and emotions. Force yourself constantly to live beyond your means for the sake of a fuller, finer life."

"GO INTO DEBT!" Those words were the only legacy my brave father left me—but they were enough. Always they have been a challenge to my cowardice and laziness—always they have made living a richer and prouder adventure. And I've yet to see any life retain its zest or meaning that didn't go into debt."

BOUGHT CHARACTER

I thought of those words yesterday when I saw Mark Schinnerls drug store on Christopher street. First time I met Mark he was handing out toothpaste and as friendly a grin as ever lighted a crowded New York counter. Some day, he confided to me, he was going to own a counter of his own. That was 18 months ago. Now he does.

Ask Mark how he did it and he'll tell you about that two per cent discount, A $400 bill of goods—could he make it? Make it in time to get the two per cent cash discount? He vowed he could.

So Mark came down to work one hour—two—before his regular time. Held the store open two—three—hours after closing time.

Today Mark's thinner than he was. Has some wrinkles he didn't have before. But he paid that bill . . . got that discount . . . and owed no other store.

And owns more than one store. Mark Schinnerl put something into himself far more precious than he put into the bank; bought something far more enduring than anything on his shelves when he went into debt—he bought character.

"You want to live—? Want to live with more color and wider walls? THEN GO INTO DEBT!

That's That

-:- -:- -:-

By Bruce Gustin

One of the weakest tricks of which New Dealers have been guilty is the Works Progress Administration plan of using relief money to buy motion picture propaganda in support of the Roosevelt Administration. Every important commercial newsreel concern but one has been invited to bid on a WPA contract to produce films recording the story of WPA activities. The only big concern which was not invited to bid is Universal Newsreel which last Spring warned motion exhibitors: "DON'T LET YOUR SCREEN BE USED FOR PROPAGANDA BY ANY ONE OR ANY INTEREST."

The WPA was organized to take the unemployed off a cash dole and put them to work. At least, that is what President Roosevelt gave the people to understand. But under this motion picture program, WPA funds —money wrung from taxpayers— are to be used to produce movie pictures glorifying WPA projects. EVERY DOLLAR SPENT ON SUCH A RACKET IS A DOLLAR TAKEN AWAY FROM SOME UNEMPLOYED MAN WHO HAS BEEN REFUSED WORK ON THE PLEA THAT THE GOVERNMENT HAS NO MONEY TO SPEND ON HIM.

The WPA movies are to be political propaganda for the re-election of President Roosevelt. There is no pretense that they are to be anything else. A contract is to be left to some newsreel company to produce at least one 600-foot reel a month for a year. The tentative form of the contract states the purpose is "to present to the citizens of a particular state, or area, information about the operations of WPA in that state or area."

The picture most familiar to WPA workers which should be taken but which will not be taken would show men from the relief rolls toiling with pick and shovel at $55 to $60 a month while political favorites are holding down supervisory and administrative jobs at $100 and $150 a month and up. Another picture which would interest both the unemployed who are being duped by political racketeers and the taxpayers who are being bunkoed would show the WPA trying to buy public favor with taxpayers' money taken from the unemployed.

If the New Dealers want to spend money from the Democratic campaign fund, privately subscribed, to have moving pictures made of WPA projects or anything else, that is legitimate. They have a right to do that. But when government officials use public money to propagandize any program for purely political purposes, that is in effect a misapplication of public funds.

Rubber stamp congressmen and senators who voted nearly five billion dollars to the President to spend as he pleases are just as responsible as he for this scandalous plan to use taxpayers' money to buy political propaganda for the New Deal. They surrendered to the executive the constitutional power and responsibility of Congress to decide how and where Federal appropriations shall be spent. They should be held accountable with the President.

"Custer's Last Stand"

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

"I firmly believe that if General Custer had been allowed to choose in the Sioux campaign he would have gone alone, as he said with the Cheyennes and the Arapahoes, into the council tent of the Sioux to induce them to go back on their reservations without fighting. Custer knew the unfair treatment of the Sioux by the government, but when he was sent out to fight them he had no choice."

The speaker is Colonel Charles Francis Bates, retired, writer of the history of the Battle of Little Big Horn, done in booklet form for the recent celebration of the 60th anniversary of the last big fight between the United States soldiers and the Indians.

Custer's Last Stand has been lighted in story and song. At the same time, Custer's tactics have been nailed into question, while his adherents have sought to make out a case against other commanders for what they termed a failure to support Custer's cavalry.

"The real combat of Custer's life," says Col. Bates, "was not with the Indians, but with the civil agents of the government, many of whom were either unjust or dishonest in their treatment of the Indians.

"Custer's greatest military success against the Indians was at the Washita, where he won a decisive victory, inflicting heavy losses on the Cheyennes. Shortly afterward, he won their respect and admiration by going into two of their camps at different times in order to treat them as friends."

OPPOSING VIEWS

A different view of "Yellow Hair" as the Indians called Custer, is presented by Frederic F. Van de Water in his biography of the cavalryman, which he titled "Glory Hunter." Mr. Van de Water comes to the conclusion that Custer's ambition and impetuousness far outweighed his judgment.

"Over his memory, his deeds, his character and particularly his death," says the writer, "Custerphobe and Custerphile strive with the heat of the man's actual intimates. He was a person when it was impossible to regard with patience His death did not placate, though it did silence his enemies. The years that elapsed before their own ends never diminished the clear loyalty of his adherents."

The late Major-General Hugh Scott made an intensive study of the campaign against the Sioux, which led up to Little Big Horn, when he, Scott, was a lieutenant in the 7th Cavalry, Custer's old command, which Scott joined soon after the massacre.

General Scott's conclusion was that the orders of the Secretary of Interior commanding the Indians to report to agencies under the threat of force, was the cause of the trouble. It was an order which General Scott found to be unjust and illegal.

INDIANS DEFENDED

The Indians were in the country which belonged to them by reason of a treaty confirmed by the Senate of the United States. For the most part, they were getting food and making blankets. It was dangerous for a white man to be found in their country, but as General Scott says, a white man had no right to be there.

The Indians, General Scott says, would have gone along with Custer if he had sought a parley. But Custer did not allow this. He attacked only because he believed the Indians had discovered his presence.

If he had not attacked, they would have gotten away on their horses from General Terry's infantry, and Custer would have been held responsible.

Custer and every man in his five troops of cavalry fell at Little Big Horn. That any other officer might have saved the day is idle conjecture. Custer had to decide quickly when it appeared the Sioux knew of the existence of his force near their encampment.

His decision was that to attack them was the only means of preventing their getting away. This he did.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Helen Rowland

It is not enough for a wife to wear a rose-colored negligee to breakfast. In the cold, gray light of morning, every woman should wear rose-colored glasses—and a Maxim silencer.

A woman always guesses that a man who loves her can read her like a book, whereas, if he admires the binding, he is always willing to take the "type" on faith.

A woman hasn't complete faith in the endurance of her husband's love until she cheerfully lets him see with her hair in waves and her face covered with a clay pack.

Never judge a man's love by his pleasure in being near you—but by his inability to stay away from you.

One reason why men are so careful never to say anything sentimentally binding to a girl, is probably because they know that the feminine mind is like a pensieve—once you drop anything into it, you can't get it out without smashing something.

Next to failing to laugh at the point of a man's joke, the greatest crime a woman can commit is to laugh before he reaches it.

Every day is just "another day" to a man; but a woman usually spends today worrying about how she will suffer tomorrow for the mistakes she made yesterday.

Almost any woman can manage to bear her real troubles and force a smile; her greatest difficulty is to keep her imaginary troubles from marring HER.

There are more ways of surprising a man than by marrying him—but none surer.

Worst of Tax Laws

From Richmond (Va.) News-Leader

Fortunate in many things, President Roosevelt never was quite so lucky as in the fact the election of 1936 comes before the country begins to pay taxes under the amended Revenue Act.

Some provisions of that law are reasonable, but some are so incredibly harsh that they will produce a state of mind just one step short of rebellion.

Take, first, a corporation of $100,000 that fell behind by $10,000 in the tough years.

Assume that this corporation makes $12,000 in 1936.

Instead of paying out $2000 in dividends, it seeks to build up its working capital.

Because it makes no distribution of dividends and applies all earnings to wiping out its deficit, the Federal tax will be $2632—or 21.9 per cent of net earnings, more than one-fifth.

Assume a corporation with a capital of $500,000 and a deficit of $80,000. This concern makes $60,000 in 1936—not enough to replace the loss on its capital account.

Yet if this corporation supplies the $50,000 frugally to the reduction of its deficit, how does the federal government deal with it?

The tax bill of the corporation is $16,198—or 27 per cent of its entire net earnings.

Paying this tax, the corporation is able to reduce its deficit of $80,000 by no more than $43,802 though its stockholders get no dividends.

Take, on the other hand, a million-dollar corporation that entered 1936 with no deficit and this year earns $100,000.

As it does not require any additional working capital, it pays the full amount of its earnings, less taxes, as dividends.

It pays a "normal" corporation tax of $12,846—and no surtax.

In other words, its taxes are 12.8 per cent of net earnings, whereas the smaller corporation half that size, struggling to restore its capital, will be greater in actual amount by $2,848, and, in percentage, double those of the larger concern.

Never, so far as we know, was there such shameful discrimination against the corporation of moderate size in the name of doctrinaire economics, never was business so punished for attempting to be solvent.
